No Bolshevism Yet
Bombarding the Atom
Don't Overload Your Nerves
The President Runs Risks

—By Arthur Brisbane

ROSE PASTOR STOKES, dead in Germany, was a radical young Jewish girl, who married a rich American, and later went to Russia.

She believed that she would live to see Bolshevism rule the United States, but was disappointed.

She might return many times on the reincarnation theory, and live in this country for many generations before seeing any radical change from our kind of government.

There are too many corner lots to be bought at a bargain, too many opportunities for private enterprise in this country to make Communism in any of its forms a possibility.

This nation is interested in accumulating, not in dividing.

If Mrs. Stokes should come back 25 years hence she would probably find Bolshevism gone from Russia, and somebody sitting on a throne there wearing a crown.

Human beings do not give up old-fashioned methods until they have outgrown them.

Scientists attacking the atom report "progress."

That atom, a word from the Greek meaning "not to be cut" because men assumed that nothing could be smaller, is now explored by chemists and physicists as astronomers explore the solar system and the outside universe.

Terrific energy, unknown to men hitherto, is locked up in the atom, so much of it, that the atomic energy of one tablespoonful of water would run the biggest steamship across the Atlantic and back. Scientists do not ask you to believe it, they PROVE it.

In attacking the atom, to release and use its energy, scientists use the "deuton," which is the nucleus of an extra heavy-weight hydrogen called "hydrogen two."

These "deutons" or "atom guns," with an electric charge of 1,330,000 volts, are fired at the heart of an atom of lithium.

Scientists assure you that while only about one in 1,000,000 atomic bullets hit the mark, they nevertheless release ten times as much energy as they use in their bombardment!

You ask how they are going to harness and use that energy, and it seems so unimportant to the layman.

Some day it may be more important to human welfare than the discovery of steam or electricity.

When Papin was trying to develop the steam engine, which he almost created, but could not quite develop, everybody would have called his work a waste of time.

Prof. Hill of the University of London, addressing scientists gathered in Chicago, informs you that your nerves are like telegraph wires and will not stand overloading without "wire trouble." Like everything else in nature, the nerves create heat when at work.

Prof. Hill has built a thermometer measuring a change in temperature as small as two millionths of a degree.

We live in an interesting universe with a temperature more than four hundred degrees below zero centigrade, in space, and above forty million degrees centigrade inside of the sun.

The substances that we study and call matter, all made up of minute charges of "negative and positive" electricity, are so light that some float in the air, while others so heavy on some of the "dwarf stars" that a piece as big as the end of your thumb would weigh 2000 pounds.

President Roosevelt, who enjoys danger and excitement and apparently knows nothing about fear, took his tiny sailboat out to sea yesterday, with a hard north wind blowing, on rough water.

It is to be hoped that some fast government ship is within hailing distance of that sailboat. The President is a strong swimmer and could keep afloat for some time if his boat should turn over.

The people hope that it will not turn. They need him, and some of them wish he would not run risks.

Mr. Hitler continues to develop new ideas and tries each one. His latest plan is to tax bachelors so heavily that they will be driven into matrimony and the production of more little Nazis. His idea before that was to tell parents:

"If you don't do as I say I will take your children away from you and have them raised by the state in accordance with the best interests of Germany."

He has already written his own obituary and that of his party, but it may not be printed as he wrote it.

There is wisdom in the German poet's statement that no

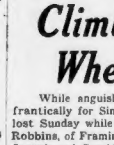
Youth Tells of Death Climb on Mountain Where Boy Is Lost

While anguished parents and a score of guides searched frantically for Simon Joseph, of Brookline, Harvard sophomore, lost Sunday while attempting to scale Mt. Washington, Charles Robbins, of Framingham, a Harvard freshman, who accompanied Joseph and Gerald Golden, a Tech student on the climb, today told the Boston Evening American the graphic story of the hazardous attempt which is feared has resulted in Joseph's death.

By CHARLES W. ROBBINS

We set out along Crawford Trail last Sunday morning, carrying nothing with us except two blankets. We expected to make the seven-mile climb to the top of Mt. Washington easily by nightfall.



Simon Joseph

Shortly after noon, and without warning, the wind increased to almost hurricane force and drove before it snow and hail that made progress almost impossible. I was in the lead, with Joseph following, and Gerald in the rear.

The snow was so thick that it was impossible to see more than a few feet in any direction. I fought my way along the trail, thinking that Joseph and Golden were behind me. I finally reached the lower Lake of Clouds where I sought shelter.

FOUND NO TRACE

"At the shelter there were seven or eight men, five of whom I learned later came from Lynn. These men went down the trail and found Golden, who was nearly exhausted, and carried him to the shelter.

"Two of the men at the shelter, when they heard about Joseph, battled their way through the storm to the Summit House on top of Mt. Washington, and there phoned to the base station where word was quickly spread that Joseph was missing.

"Golden and I were worried because if Joseph had not wandered off the trail Golden most probably would have seen him.

We stayed at the lake overnight, wrapped up in the two blankets. We returned over the trail on Monday without seeing a trace of Joseph. The trail is very treacherous, and if Joseph wandered off, he could have fallen to his death in a hundred places.

We still had hopes that Joseph might have turned back and reached the foot of the trail in safety. Finding no trace of him, we notified F. H. Forest Ranger J. J. Van Allstein.

FEAR HE IS DEAD

Allstein immediately called for volunteers among the woodsmen and guides, as he feared Joseph could not survive without food or water longer than 12 hours.

Golden and myself will join the searchers today as soon as the fog lifts, as at present it is impossible to scour the mountain trail now.

It is possible that Joseph is still alive. We sincerely hope so. And we will stay on the hunt until we find him.

Illegally Seized Rum Frees Man

Springfield, June 21 (AP)—Because liquor obtained by federal agents from Alfred A. Duval of Webster was not paid for, Judge James A. Lowell, in federal court today, threw out the case, ruling that the purchase was not legally completed until payment had been made. Counsel for Duval moved that the case be quashed.

The agents told the court they did not pay for the liquor because they knew the Government would not reimburse them. Under new regulations, the prohibition department allows no funds for such purposes.

The case of Aretta C. Smith, former North Chester postmistress, charged with misappropriation of $178 of Government funds, was put over to Boston when it was stated that she is ill.

POLICE MUST BARE RICHES OF SOLOMON

Grand Jury's Inquiry Is Halted Again for Missing Evidence

For the second time in two days failure of police to produce crime and racket records asked for by the Suffolk county grand jury today caused an abrupt halt in the investigation of crime conditions in Boston.

The grand jury session was adjourned shortly after noon, after little more than an hour, when it became known that Deputy Police Supt. John M. Anderson, who had taken some records to the inquiry, had failed to produce the ones asked for particularly.

It understood this after the abrupt halt, Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle made a peremptory demand on Police Commissioner Hultman for all available police records on the operation and supervision of a pawn shop near Sterling sq., in which Charles "King" Solomon, slain racket chief, is alleged to have been interested secretly.

SHOWS SOME RECORDS

Both Anderson and Lt. Stephen J. Gillis, "undercover man" for Hultman in a number of crime and liquor investigations, had appeared before the grand jury prior to the halt today, but it is understood neither completed his testimony.

When Anderson, who is understood to have testified relative to his list of nearly 500 gangsters, rum dealers and racketeers, appeared today he carried two large, loose-leaf folders and a mysterious brown

Newton police entered the case and have their best experts checking the "teeth prints." They're also looking for the dog.

FIRST RACE RESULT

Jubal, won; Lawsuit, second; Off Duty, third.

By WIN BROOKS

Rockingham Park Race Track, Salem, N. H., June 21—To the cloppity-clop of hoof beats on a muddy track, and the thrill that goes with the roar of the crowd as the barrier is sprung, the running horse came back into his own in New England today.

Threatening skies held down the crowd somewhat as the long heralded, 28-day racing meet was opened.

The local customers learned it is just as tough picking a winner under pari-mutuel system as in whispered conferences with the bookmaker down by the rail.

In addition to the handicap of early rain and continually threatening clouds, the programs failed to show up on time. This was doubly unfortunate because the programs alone contained the record of past performances of the approximately 500 thoroughbreds stabled here and the lads who dope their own bets had nothing but memory to go on.

The little "closed" signs were snapped down from the 63 mutuel ticket selling windows at 2 o'clock. Long lines of customers prepared

MITCHELL FATE IS WITH JURY

New York, June 21 (INS)—The six-weeks-old income tax evasion trial of Charles E. Mitchell was given to the jury today.

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, in delivering his charge to the jury, pointed out that there were two counts:

One charges Mitchell with evading $2,878,000 payment of income tax in 1929 by claiming a loss of millions through the alleged sale of stock to his wife and also by omitting $666,666 received from the management fund of the National City Bank from his tax return.

The other charges Mitchell failed to pay $758,000 income tax in 1930 by claiming a loss through the alleged sale of stock to W. O. Thompson corporation executive.

The judge pointed out that a sale would not be genuine, even if formal documents were exchanged, if the intention of the participants was not to make it so.

Mitchell sat bolt upright at the counsel table, watching the judge and listening intently. The trial has left its mark on his lean, tanned face. He looked tired and showed strain.

The maximum prison sentence, should he be convicted, would be ten years and the maximum fine $20,000.

BUCK FAINTS WHEN PEGGY BARES FEAR OF DEATH

Girl's Dramatic Story of Kidnaping, Days in Pit Told Jury

By JAMES J. SMITH
Boston American Staff Reporter

Barnstable, June 21—Only a few minutes after he had taken the witness stand today in his own defense, Cyril Buck, alleged to have joined with his brother Kenneth in the kidnaping of 10-year-old Peggy McMath, collapsed and halted the trial.

His collapse came a few moments after Peggy told her story. The first witness for the defense, Cyril had been asked if he owned his own home, when he suddenly covered his face with his hands, reeled and would have fallen if court attendants had not leaped forward and lowered him, weeping, into a chair.

Judge Edward F. Hanify immediately called a recess to allow the alleged kidnaper to recover his composure, a composure which, only a short time before, had appeared unruffled as little Peggy, simply but dramatically, recited her experience while in the hands of her kidnapers.

DENIES CYRIL'S GUILT

Mrs. Bertha Buck, mother of the two defendants and Cyril's wife were in the courtroom when Cyril collapsed.

Before he was called to the stand, Atty. Willard Carleton, his counsel, made an opening address to the court, during which he read the indictment charging Cyril with "confining and imprisoning with intent to extort."

Carleton pointed out to the jury that Cyril must be judged on that particular charge and on no other.

When the attorney launched into a laudatory sketch of Cyril's 32 years of life in Harwich where, Carleton said, the defendant was a hard-working citizen of good character, which would be proved.

Then the defense counsel began asking Cyril questions, and had got barely through half a dozen when the collapse came.

PARLEY SPLIT INTO '3-RING CIRCUS,' SAYS WALKER

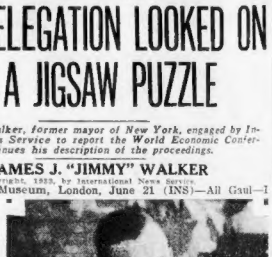
U. S. DELEGATION LOOKED ON AS A JIGSAW PUZZLE

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, engaged by International News Service to report the World Economic Conference, today continues his description of the proceedings.

By JAMES J. "JIMMY" WALKER

Copyright, 1933, by International News Service.

Geological Museum, London, June 21 (INS)—All Gaul—I mean the World Economic Conference — was divided into three parts today with the meetings of two monetary and one economic committees, just like Barnum & Bailey's three-ring circus. And I rather think with the same purpose in mind, of making it impossible to follow all the show at the same time.



JAMES J. WALKER
Snapped as Reporter at London Conference

The two monetary committees dealt with finances and the economic committee with wheat and sugar. It was a bit shocking to popular history to observe how little interest the politicians manifested in sugar. However, the subject of wheat seems to be winning serious consideration, certainly by the North American representatives.

I am still one of those who regard this international meeting as a matter of great importance and huge possibilities to the millions of unemployed who make up a large part of the population of every country of the civilized world, and to the crippled industries that the world's prosperity depends on.

But it cannot be denied there is an atmosphere of inertia surrounding the convention hall. This may be attributed to a multitude of causes.

The smaller nations are naturally looking to and depending upon action by the three largest and leading nations of the conference, namely, Great Britain, France and the United States of America. They recognize the power of each, and the controlling power of the combination of the three.

But, meanwhile, the Big Three have sadly shadow boxing. Everyone wants the other fellow to go the leading. Not with what he needs or wants, but with what he will give or concede. And that's just where the show comes to an impasse and the buck-passing begins.

At incident of importance occurred when Secretary Hull crashed the gate at Buckingham Palace in response to an invitation from King George. But for public consumption it turned out to be just an incident, for while it was admitted the conference was discussed, that was all anybody was let in on.

U. S. Group a Puzzle

The American delegation, which was labeled with all the responsibility for all the world's troubles during the early days of the conference, is still the jigsaw puzzle of the convention.

No one can go so far as to say there is no harmony or co-operation within the American delegation, but there doesn't seem to be that unanimity of opinion and leadership that characterizes most every other national group. This may eventually be all for the best.

But even if they were all of one mind, you can't convince the country they have concealed upon their persons a sufficient amount of discretion to think that they're thinking.

They are convinced that the government of the United States is steering a sailboat into the placid waters of a three weeks' vacation, but that a new ambassador, a new high commission, in the person of Prof. Moley, is about to steer his way across the Atlantic with the last word, the "lowdown" of President Roosevelt, in his portfolio.

Interest in Moley

All day long his name rattles through the geological museum in all kinds of fractured English. They have all been told he is the headman of President Roosevelt's "brain trust." And most of the delegates are having brain storms trying to understand it.

"This brain trust—what is it?"

"This Moley—he is who?"

But everyone is willing to leave the answer to the professor himself when he gathers the international scholars about him.

He has borne the less been billed as a political Moses who would lead the wandering tribes into a land of milk and honey, and knowing their appetites for milk and honey, I know he has a job cut out for him—and he has my sympathy.

The "build up" given him has been so big it may not be humanly possible to live up to expectations. But if he puts it over—or even gets away with it—he will be able to sign himself at any time or any place in all the world as—"Holy Moley."

British Cartoon Hits U. S.

London, June 21 (INS)—The American delegation to the World Economic Conference was satirized in a cartoon in the London Daily Express today.

It shows Sec. Hull in a nursemaid's uniform pushing a perambulator bearing a buxom baby labelled "10 per cent tariff cut," and crying "Pop!" to Uncle Sam, who is shown accompanied by a jewelled female who represents Congress. Congres is saying:

"Sam, you never told me!"

And Uncle Sam replies:

"I repudiate it."

Scouts Organize to Carry on Work

Former Boy Scouts of Medford have come to the rescue of scouting in that city by declaring they will not let work stop because of lack of funds. The Scout council had announced scouting would cease with the close of the current month. Former Scouts have organized a committee and pledged themselves to raise the required money so that the work may be continued.

Stay in the Shade

Something like this always happens when Uncle Sam wanders abroad.

If he doesn't watch out, this is the way he will return from London, where the World Economic Conference is going on.

One day—perhaps—Uncle Sam will learn to remain where he belongs—on his own patch of ground, and under his own umbrella.

DEFENSE WINS IN QUINN CASE

The Quinn murder trial will be prolonged into next week, it was indicated today when Judge Fosdick ruled in Salem Superior Court that preliminary inquiries on testimony to be given by six Lynn police officials must be made while the jury is excluded.

The ruling came after Atty. Warren Patten, counsel for Joseph Scrowd of Cambridge, on trial with Edward Cullen of Salem and Tony Buffa of Lynn for the murder of the Lynn officer, objected on the grounds that such evidence constituted a "confession" and was gained from Scrowd under duress.

Chief James H. Broad of Lynn told the jury today that Scrow told him he went to Lynn Feb. 15 and made arrangements with Tony Buffa to place Mrs. Scrow, and Buffa in a compromising position in order that Scrow might gain custody of their two children.

According to Chief Broad, Scrow said he obtained a group of witnesses from Chelsea and in his presence they surprised Mrs. Scrow with Buffa.

After the successful "compromise," Scrow told Broad, he wandered through Lynn streets until he reached the shooting scene where two men who followed him pushed him to the ground and dazed him. This was after Patrolman Quinn had been shot in a scuffle.

What's a Governor Without a Hat?

Worcester, Mass., June 21 (AP) —A silk hat, or rather the lack of one, today caused a traffic whirl at Main and Pleasant sts.

Gov. Elk, en route to the Holy Cross commencement exercises, forgot his silk topper at his Westfield home and drew his executive car to a halt in the heart of the city with a view to assuring his sartorial elegance at the ceremonies.

Presence of the official car and its police escort porved too much for passersby and before the governor could leave the car several hundred persons had gathered about his car, halting all movement of traffic.

Headed by a delegation of troopers, he entered a nearby store where he obtained a silk hat, and was again on his way.

Roosevelt Sees Douglas, House and Sails on Way

Gloucester, June 21—With a good "beam wind" blowing across the harbor, President Roosevelt ordered the crew of the Amberjack II to weigh anchor at 12:30 p. m. today.

President Roosevelt navigated the vessel across the harbor, through shipping, into the Annisquam River and into Ipswich Bay. By following this route, the Amberjack II cut off 10 miles of the course.

Two destroyers, following the President on the vacation cruise, were forced to sail around Cape Ann to meet the schooner.

It is believed the Amberjack and its crew will spend the night in Little Harbor, near Portsmouth, N. H.

SEES HOUSE AND DOUGLAS

While in Gloucester, the President conferred aboard the Amberjack with Col. Edward M. House, authority on international affairs and advisor to President Woodrow Wilson, and later with Lewis M. Douglas, director of the budget.

The President, bronzed by the sun and wind, was still bareheaded as he again put out to sea.

Receiving his official callers and wives of members of the crew in Gloucester he put on a clean white shirt but there was no tie around the neck. He wore a gray knitted jacket for this dress-up occasion.

Well along the Annisquam river on the way out the banks are lined with summer homes, and all along, there were waves and "helios" for the President.

CHATS WITH FISHERMEN

When Capt. Pine and the other skippers went aboard the President kept a dozen other callers waiting while he chatted with the fishermen.

"I think the painting is particularly lovely," said the President, "and I will hang it in my study in the White House."

Looking across the water at the Thebaud he exclaimed:

"Isn't she a grand vessel! Look at those lines." Turning to Capt. Pine, he added: "You should be proud to own her."

Capt. Ed Proctor, president of the Gloucester Master Mariners' Association, conferred an honorary membership upon the President, although Mr. Roosevelt expressed doubts as to his qualifications.

"I don't think I could take Thebaud out to the Banks," he said, but Capt. Pine counterde with: "I'd trust you with her anywhere."

Mr. Roosevelt inquired of Cap. Pine the present state of affairs in the fishing industry.

"How is it coming on?" he asked. "I hope things are getting better for you." He also inquired if Thebaud would visit the World's Fair at Chicago.

The President and his party will have fresh fish for supper tonight. Two large fish from Gloucester boats were taken aboard by his callers.

The Amberjack II, during the morning here was athe center of a gala array of sailing craft, fishing schooners and power cruisers as virtually everyone here rushed to get a glimpse of the executive.

GREETS BEN PINE

As the yacht tossed in the green chop at Dog Bar breakwater at the mouth of the harbor, President Roosevelt was paid a visit at noon by Capt. Ben Pine and a group of salt-pitted master mariners of Gloucester.

The fishermen sailed out aboard the international racing schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, which they sailed to Washington a few weeks ago to seek aid of the President and the federal government for the New England fishing industry.

Capt. Pine and Amille Gruppe, the artist, presented President Roosevelt with a large painting of the Thebaud, under full sail in one of her races. The fishermen visited for a while before returning to Gloucester.

HEADS FOR PORTLAND

Mr. Roosevelt slept later than usual this morning, and then received his secretary, Stephen T. Early, who brought the latest wireless reports from Washington over from the destroyer Ellis, one of the trio of Navy boats convoying the Amberjack II northward.

Mr. Roosevelt will pick up his two sons, Franklin and John, in Portland. James, his eldest son, is aboard the Amberjack II, along with four friends, including Paul D. Rust, owner of the little schooner which the President is making his vacation home.

MOLEY PHONES LONDON; SAILS

New York, June 21 (INS)—Last minute instructions President Roosevelt gave Prof. Raymond Moley were so pressing for immediate transmission that Moley telephoned part of them to the American delegation at the World Economic Conference in London before he sailed today.

The Asst. Sec. of State, who sped by plane to the President yesterday off the Massachusetts coast, was at his Columbia office here at 7 a. m. and immediately got in touch with London.

In a brief talk with reporters, Moley only smiled when asked just what policies President Roosevelt had outlined to him.

"The President said all there was to say yesterday," he countered. "We don't claim infallibility, but we do try to do things in a human way."

Moley said there was no possibility that the President himself might go to the conference.

Gen. John J. Pershing and Edmund Day, technical adviser to the American delegation, also are passengers on the Manhattan. Three United States vice-consuls "sailed too—T. C. Achilles for Rome, G. W. Ray for London and L. W. Taylor for Copenhagen.

Williams of the Church of the Messiah, Roxbury, was arraigned in Middlesex court today on a charge of larceny of $1000 from Lottie White of Cambridge, who lent the pastor the money a year ago for church purposes. The pastor was placed on probation for two years on condition that he begin immediately to repay the loan.

LEADERS FIGHT TO BALK WORLD PARLEY CRASH

Roosevelt Rushes New Orders to Envoys; May Bar Cash Talk

BULLETIN

London, June 21 (AP) — The American delegation to the world economic conference received fresh instructions from President Roosevelt this afternoon, it was authoritatively learned. The nature of the instructions was not divulged.

London, June 21 (AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and other leaders of the world economic conference were understood today to be considering the radical step of suspending discussion of all monetary matters and of dealing only with economic problems in order to prevent the possible wrecking of the conference over the currency stabilization imbroglio.

Gold standard countries were still talking about forcing adjournment of the conference pending stabilization of the American dollar and other major currencies.

There was another startling development today. The conference awoke to the fact that the recently disclosed scheme for the creation of a central European economic bloc, which would have far-reaching effect on international affairs, had taken on amazing vigor and was growing apace at the ortsle of the conference. The report was that Premier Mussolini was pushing hard to force a successful conclusion to the negotiations.

Laborite M. P. Says Lady Astor 'Gives Him a Pain' by Sneers

London, June 21 (INS)—Bluntly declaring she "gives me a pain," a Laborite member of the House of Commons subjected Lady Astor to a scathing attack in Parliament today.

Dobbie turned on the only American member of the House, and shouted:

"I protest against the callous and cruel attitude of well-dressed and well-fed people in this house against the hungry people of this country."

"You don't look hungry," Lady Astor remarked.

"You may laugh and sneer at the unemployed," Dobbie said, "You'll laugh and sneer once too often."

Dobbie then proceeded with his speech, but Viscountess Astor again interrupted him.

"She can't help it," Dobbie said in exasperation. "Where there's no sense there's no feeling."

"We don't drink champagne," said Lady Astor by way of reply, alluding to a remark made by Dobbie.

"By God, she gives me a pain listening to her," Dobbie expostulated. "I don't know whether she accuses some of us o fdrinking champagne. We couldn't afford it if we wanted to."

The speaker of the House finally restored order.

2 CITIES FIGHT CHELSEA FIRE

A two-alarm fire of unknown origin swept through a two-story building in Crescent ave., Chelsea, early today, causing damage estimated at over $15,000.

The building, the property of the Boston & Maine railroad, is leased by Abraham Shapiro, of Blossom st., Chelsea, and is occupied by the New England Wood Company, dealing in coal, wood and sawdust.

The fire broke out at 5:30 a. m., and a few minutes after apparatus first reached the scene, a second alarm was ordered. Fire officials feared a cluster of dwelling houses on the opposite side of the street might be swept by the flames.

Everett and Revere fire apparatus covered Chelsea stations as every available piece of Chelsea apparatus was rushed to the fire. Everett apparatus was also used to aid the Chelsea department at the fire.

Ely Urges State to Share in U.S. Recovery Act Funds

Recommendations for legislation to permit Massachusetts to take advantage of the National Recovery Act were submitted by Gov. Ely to the Legislature today.

He recommended the creation of an administrative board of three members to approve every construction project except highways.

The Governor recommended the appropriation of not more than $30,000,000 and to take care of notes and bonds to 15 years through a retail sales tax.

The Governor estimated there would be available to Massachusetts and her cities and towns, for expenditure in public construction, about $75,000,000.

He pointed out that the federal government would furnish approximately only 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials, which must be repaid, and the state and communities must raise the other 70 per cent.

His said it would be necessary for Massachusetts to enact laws insuring her co-operation with the federal policy of a public works program for the relief of unemployment and the recovery of industry. There is a congressional appropriation of $400,000,000 for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, he said, which requires no enabling legislation. Aside from this amount there remains $2,900,000,000 available, of which Massachusetts' share, he said would probably be about $75,000,000.

The governor also recommended that legislation be drawn up to provide that any project be invalid if disapproved by him.

Of all self-liquidating projects that could be proposed, those relating to housing, in the governor's opinion, are most suitable.

That part of the message dealing with borrowing was referred immediately to the committee on ways and means and municipal finance, acting jointly, with a public hearing set for next Friday at 10:30 a. m.

The proposed sales tax to finance the borrowing was sent to the committee on taxation and a hearing set down for tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Again the dollar drops gently and again stocks rise, at one time reaching the highest level of the year.

Recently we were talking about "all time lows" for stocks. Yesterday it was an "almost all time low" for the dollar.

Francs and pounds went up.

While this disturbs those that have dollars locked away in bonds or mortgages, it also disturbs the countries whose money is gone up.

A cheap dollar means more buying in the United States, less buying in the countries with dear money.

The Bible tells us that man is made a little lower than the angels. Exceptionally bad samples seem to be CONSIDERABLY LOWER.

A kind-hearted collector for a milk business, sympathizing with a poor beggar, bought him a hearty meal, revealing the fact that he carried money with him. The next day the same beggar with a friend waylaid the kind-hearted collector, beat him dangerously, and took $85 from him.

A citizen held up by a young man and robbed of $18 was told, "Thanks; that will help me through college."

The State of New York reports that 50,000 men have been called back to work by various reviving industries since the first of the year.

You see too many smoke stacks free of smoke as you travel through the country, but conditions are improving.

If our precious dollar becomes really cheap, and those that have hoarded it decide to put it to work while there is still time, improvement will be rapid.

COURT FREES PEARCE FROM HIS MUCH-MARRIED WIFE

SPOUSE ALREADY HAD THREE HUSBANDS

Annulment Is Granted After Marblehead Man's Plea

The much-married Mrs. Grace K. Pearce of Marblehead is apparently free to pursue her hobby of collecting husbands, as a result of today's action by Judge White in Salem Probate Court in granting a decree of nullity to Arthur P. Pearce, Jr.

In his petition filed March 20 last, Pearce, who lives at 122 Clifton st., Marblehead, charged that he was the fourth spouse taken by Mrs. Pearce without benefit of death or divorce.

The decision declaring the Pearce union void, was handed down by Judge White without a hearing. In February, Mrs. Pearce, who was still living in the Clifton st. mansion, laughed merrily when asked if she would contest the petition.

ADDICTED TO HABIT

Pearce, president of a Boston industrial real estate corporation, caused a sensation when he charged that his wife's past was all cluttered up with husbands from whom she had neglected to obtain a severance of marital ties.

Apparently she was unable to take husbands or leave them alone and had become addicted to the habit of marrying. He said that under the name of Miss Grace Knowlton he married her in Baltimore, Md., in December of 1930, only to learn later she was the wife of William P. Crum of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The situation was further complicated, he said he learned, when last May the New York Supreme Court awarded an annulment to Crum.

FOUND SUMMONS

The Crum annulment was granted on the ground that the woman was the wife of George Boyle of New York city when Crum entered into the bonds of wedlock with her. When and how Boyle passed out of her life was not revealed.

Pearce said Mrs. Pearce told him before their wedding she had been divorced from Crum, and neglected any mention of Boyle. He discovered the true state of affairs, he declared, when in searching a desk for receipted bills, he found one of his own official envelopes containing a summons in connection with the Crum annulment case. The former Mrs. Pearce could not be located today.

Ely in a message to the Legislature.

The message was referred to the committee on banks.

Just Another Job for Coast Guards -:- -:- Salt Water Nurse Needs Help

THE C. G. 2277 GETS A LINE TO LADY'S KIPPER AGROUND IN STRANDWAY MUD — SHE WAITED IN HER SLOOP

Dorothy M. Koeller, 22-year-old nurse in Quincy City Hospital, is particular about whose assistance she accepts. When her little black sloop ran aground in the mud off South Boston's Strandway, she stood by the ship all night until Capt. Frank Holbrook's City Point coast guard crew came to her aid. For hours she refused the assistance of others, even refused to divulge her name. And the early morning cloudburst did not shake her resolution to wait for the coast guard. (Boston American photos.)

HARVARD YOUTH LOST 3 DAYS ON MOUNTAIN

Simon Joseph, Caught in Storm Sunday, Feared Dead

Ravines and gullies on the flanks of Mt. Washington, the graves in the past of many adventurous spirits who sought to conquer the 6000-foot peak, were searched today for the body of Simon Joseph, 20-year-old Harvard sophomore, lost since Sunday.

A party of forest rangers, guides and woodsmen, numbering 25, at the direction of Gov. Winant of New Hampshire, set out at dawn today in search of the missing youth. Few of the party expressed any hope of finding Joseph alive.

Fog swept down the deep gashed sides of the mountain today to hamper the search.

At Twin Mountain House, a few miles from the Crawford Trail where young Joseph disappeared, his anguished parents stanad by a window, waiting for the fog to lift and praying for the safety of their only son.

With them are two of Joseph's companions on the climb who weathered the terrific storm which overtook them.

Joseph was one of three students who set out on Sunday morning, with no food and only two blankets, to attempt the difficult ascent.

He was accompanied by Charles W. Robbins, 19, Harvard freshman, of Salem End rd., Framingham, and Gerald Golden, Tech sophomore, of Nottingbill rd., Brighton. Joseph, son of a Newbury st., antique dealer, lives in Amory st., Brookline.

The trio were separated in a sudden storm as they were battling toward the summit along Crawford trail, a treacherous route with death-pits everywhere along the side of the road.

MET LYNN MAN

Robbins finally made his way to a shelter at the Lake of the Clouds where five Lynn men, also caught in the storm, had taken refuge.

The Lynn men were Edward Cody, Edward Persson, William Dudley, Charles Moriarty and John Ellsworth.

After reviving Robbins, who was near exhaustion, they set out to find Golden, and discovered him, nearly unconscious, staggering up the trail.

John Plympton, of Wilmington, another climber who was at the lake shelter, and Ellsworth fought their way to the Summit House on top of the mountain where word was sent to base station by telephone of Joseph's disappearance.

The fact that he vanished without being seen by either Golden or Robbins lends strength to the belief that blinded by snow particles that cut like needle points, he stumbled off the trail to his death.

It was only little over a year ago that Ernest McAdams, 22, of Stoneham, and Joseph Chadwick, 24, of Woburn, became lost in a storm near the summit and were frozen to death before they were found.

Girl Skipper 'Rescued' After Night on Grounded Sloop

Cold, wet and hungry after a night spent standing by her grounded sloop, Miss Dorothy M. Koeller, 22, of Albatross st., Quincy, nurse at the Quincy City Hospital, was "rescued" by the coast guard today from the beach on the Strandway, at the foot of H st., South Boston.

Despite the cloudburst of the early morning the attractive captain and crew of the sloop refused to abandon ship.

For several hours considerable mystery surrounded the girl when she refused all proffers of assistance and refused to give any information concerning herself.

She had been nearly 12 hours on her grounded, leaking craft, when, at 10 o'clock, she consented calling the coast guard for assistance.

On a nickel borrowed from a reporter Capt. Frank Holbrook's City Point coast guardsmen were called. Then the attractive captain turned on the reporter and told him:

"Get in out of the rain before you get your feet wet, you big softie!"

The coast guard patrol boat C. G. 2277 accompanied by Boatswain's Mate A. M. Johnson, pulled the sloop off the beach and took "Captain" Koeller aboard. The sloop was towed to the Neponset river while its skipper sought the warmth of the patrol boat's cabin.

The girl purchased the boat for $45 and spent her hours after work scraping painting and making it seaworthy.

WIFE OF BOXER DENIES RIFT

Rome, June 21 (INS)—Reports that she and her husband are temperamentally incompatible were branded as "ridiculous" today by Signora Enzo Fiermonte, wife of the Italian boxer whose name had been mentioned in connection with the divorce proceedings planned by Mrs. William Dick, widow of John Jacob Astor, in Reno.

Signora Fiermonte, the former Toeca Manetti, reiterated she would refuse to grant her husband a divorce but insisted there was no other woman in his life. Fiermonte is athletic instructor to Mrs. Dick's sons.

"My husband never mentioned any woman in his letters to me," Signora Fiermonte said. "He simply wrote that he wanted a divorce on the grounds our characters were incompatible. This is ridiculous because we never quarrelled. We adored each other.

"I am convinced Enzo lost his head in America. I must prevent him from spoiling our future as well as that of our son. I do not intend to grant him a divorce."

DENY GEORGE DIVORCE PLEAS

All went for naught today in the divorce battle waged by Henry W. George, technician at the Harvard Medical School, and Mrs. Viola M. George of Audubon rd., Back Bay, when Judge George M. Poland threw both suits out of probate court.

The hearing covered three days, and the divorce actions of both husband and wife charged cruel and abusive treatment, with the Harvard man objecting also to Mrs. George's alleged overfriendliness with her counsel, Attorney Herbert E. Sharps.

Judge Poland dismissed the cross suits at the close of arguments today, with the comment that neither had proved cruel and abusive treatment and that by living together after the alleged acts they had apparently condoned the claimed ill treatment.

Mrs. George was the final witness in the case today and revealed under cross-examination that her automobile is registered in Sharps' name. She said this was done, however, to protect his counsel fees in the case.

POLICE HUNTING MISSING GIRL

Police of three states were notified today of the disappearance yesterday of Miss June Clark, 15, daughter of Albert H. Clark of Needham assistant superintendent of mails in the Boston postoffice.

The girl left home yesterday without taking any personal possessions with her, with the intention of hitch-hiking to Hollywood, according to Chief of Police Arthur Bliss.

She was reported seen walking on the Worcester highway dressed in gray trousers and a white shirt. Her parents believe she was wearing a bathing suit.

It was learned after questioning school chums that Miss Clark had arranged with another chum, Pauline Nicholson, 13, of Hillside ave., Needham, to meet at Atlantic City before leaving for the coast and a career in the movies.

The Nicholson girl left home Sunday and was picked up yesterday in New York, where the authorities held her until arrival of her parents. She arrived home last night, but couldn't throw any light on the whereabouts of the Clark girl.

New York, Connecticut and state police have been ordered to be on the lookout for the girl. She is described as a brunette, with brown eyes, bobbed hair and as being about 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighing 130 pounds.

BROGNA DEATH GUNS DUG UP

Three guns, believe by police to have been used in the slaying of George Brogna in Revere a few weeks ago, were found buried in a field off Washington ave., Chelsea, early today by Sergt. Walter Barden of the Chelsea police.

Sergt. Barden went to the field on a mysterious tip received last night. The guns are a .38-caliber revolver, a .32-caliber automatic and a .32-caliber revolver of foreign make.

They will be examined by Capt. Charles A. Van Amburgh, state firearms expert. Belief the guns were used in the Brogna slaying came from the medical examiner's report that bullets from more than one type of gun were used and that one was apparently of foreign manufacture.

ONE KILLED IN RAID BY NAZIS

Berlin, June 21 (AP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Nazi administration moved against Dr. Alfred Hugenberg's Nationalist party today with a series of raids on various party headquarters, in which one man was killed, and with orders dissolving the Nationalist auxiliary organizations.

The fatality occurred at Frankfort-on-the-Oder, where a man was shot during a raid.

Dr. Hugenberg, who recently returned from London after he had been virtually repudiated by other German delegates to the World Economic Conference, was remaining incommunicado. Some quarters asserted that today's events would result in his resignation from the cabinet, in which he is minister of economics and agriculture.

Before Hitler gained power in Germany the Nationalists were his allies.

N. H. TO SPEED REPEAL CALL

Concord, N. H., June 21—With New Hampshire 2's to 1 for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, Gov. John G. Winant today called a convention of the 10 "wet" delegates to place the Granite State in the repeal column on July 11.

The governor also approved a bill to legalize sale of six per cent beer and wine after prohibition repeal.

Unofficial figures complete for the state, which drew a light vote about half that recorded in the last presidential election, showed 75,999 in favor of repeal and 30,340 against.

Although 47 of the smaller towns went "dry" all the cities went overwhelmingly wet. Manchester, the most convincing, with a majority of more than 3 to 1. Concord, home of Rev. Ernest L. Converse, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, favored repeal by more than 2 to 1.

The results of the New Hampshire election brought to 14 the number of states in favor of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment. Connecticut and Iowa also having voted repeal yesterday.

Iowa, Long Dry, Goes Wet With Connecticut

Long-dry Iowa, with Connecticut and New Hampshire, today brought to 14 the states which in unbroken succession have voted to knock the 18th Amendment out of the constitution.

The Hawkeye State's swing away from the position she had maintained for nearly two decades left drys fixing their hope for a halt in the parade on Alabama and Arkansas, both voting July 18.

Connecticut's vote of 5 to 1 astounded even the wets, who had predicted a 3 to 1 victory at best. On latest returns the vote stood at 236,915 for repeal and 38,549 against.

LENIENCY ASKED IN BAR CASE

Arguing that his client has been enduring great suffering since last summer, and that he has been virtually under suspension from the bar, Frank L. Simpson, counsel for Maxwell R. Park, who is facing disbarment proceedings in Supreme Court, today asked Judge Crosby to be lenient.

Park was charged by Dunbar F. Carpenter, special commissioner appointed by the supreme court to probe fraudulent insurance claims, with attempting to extort $25 from Olaf Helgeson, of West Newton. The complaint charges that Park brought suit for the money as counsel fees, when he had never been hired to represent Helgeson.

Sidney R. Wrightington, prosecuting the case, made no argument. Judge Crosby took the case under advisement.

"PEGGY" BARES THREATS

three days' captivity, during which she had once been threatened with death.

When Pegg was questioned on this point, however, it was brought out that her captor had threatened to chloroform her "if I bollered," and that she believed this meant "he would kill me."

She told of being called out of school, of being bound, handcuffed and gagged and hidden in a dungeon. And she told of her joyous reunion, at last, with her father—and here her freckled face broke into a wide grin, as she said happily:

"I jumped right into daddy's lap and kissed him."

A small, but sturdy figure, in her blue gingham dress, little Peggy was a trifle awed when she took the stand, but under the kindly questioning of Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley, she steadily gained confidence.

SHE WINS A LAUGH

Between her answers and the following questions her quick eyes darted to the faces of the Buck brothers, seated only a few feet away—darted as if in seeking some light of confirmation in their eyes, but their faces were immobile Kenneth seemed to glare as his gaze fastened upon her.

The little girl raised a laugh in the crowded courtroom when in describing her experience, she used the word "gag" and defense counsel immediately interrupted with an objection.

Instructed then to tell the story in her own way, Peggy naively used the word "gag" right over again, but only the laughter of the spectators broke her narrative this time.

She said she had lost two pounds during her harrowing experience.

For three days and nights, the State contends, she was kept in the company of Kenneth Buck in a cranberry shack and beneath the floor of a vacant house, being led to believe he was her friend who was shielding her from "kidnapers."

She was nervous at her ordeal, but spoke in a clear voice.

Her name is Margaret Gray McMath and she lives in Harwichport, she began.

The 10-year-old child brushed her black hair back from her forehead with a sweep of her hand as she answered questions put to her by the smiling Prosecutor, William C. Crossley.

As the questions progressed, she gained poise, the trace of fear that had been apparent when she first looked across the crowded courtroom gradually faded from her face, she shifted on her feet and put her hands on the rail.

The little girl, whose teacher had testified she was a "very bright student," told of her habits while at school. She told of the events leading to her dismissal from school.

Q—What did you see when you looked out of the window, Peggy? A—I saw a colored chauffeur.

Q—How near to the schoolhouse was the car? A—Two feet.

Q—Was the motor running. A—No.

Q—What seat did you get into? A—The front seat.

Q—What did the man say? A—He took a slip out of his pocket and said he was going to get Francis (her brother) and some other guests at the house.

Peggy said that after driving for some distance she was ordered to climb into the back seat.

Q—Then what did the man say? A—He said that if I hollered he would chloroform me.

Q—Do you know what he meant? A—Yes, he'd kill me.

The man then bound her, Peggy said, and she held her arms out to said a "piece of rag" was put illustrate how it was done. She around her mouth and a piece of brown cloth tied over her eyes.

CRAWLS IN DUNGEON

When the car stopped the man took her into a shack and put her on the floor, she said.

She was kept in the shack "until late that night." The kidnaper removed the cloth from about her mouth but made the blindfold more secure.

Then the kidnaper took her across some fields. He told her he was going to put her in a house where there was a mattress.

They walked across the fields, Peggy holding on to his coat. Finally they reached a vacant house. He told her to remain where she was as he was going for a flashlight.

"He came back with the flashlight and told me to follow him," she said.

"I crawled after him on my hands and knees, into the basement as when I came to a mattress I sat down. I wasn't tied at the time."

The man then took off her blindfold, she testified, and left her to return in about 15 minutes with sandwiches, milk and water.

She then went to sleep as the man sat by her side. She said he was still there when she awakened some time later.

Daylight came, she said, and the man left, saying he was going to get her a "tourist camp house as he wanted me to sleep on a nice bed."

As she spoke, Kenneth gazed intently at her, slouched in his seat. Now and then he whispered to the guard beside him.

Peggy told of the frequent visits of her captor while she was under the house on Wednesday, May 3, Thursday and Thursday night. On Thursday night he came to her, she said, and said he might take her back to her parents.

She said Thursday night the man put "tiny handcuffs" on her and that she once took them off because they "hurt" but put them back on again.

She held out her hands to show how the handcuffs, which she said, had no locks on them, were fastened.

The little witness said that on the night she was "taken home" the man told her not to go near the door of the cellar because some of the "gang" might get her, and he was trying to protect her from them.

IN DADDY'S ARMS

She said a car came and she got into the front seat; she was blindfolded but had been told her father would be in the car.

They rode in silence for about two miles, she said, then the car stopped.

She was put in the rear seat with her father.

The little girl's eyes closed for a moment, and then she broke into a happy smile, as she said:

"I jumped into Daddy's lap and kissed him."

Peggy laughed when, as a result of questioning, she pointed to Cyril Buck as the fourth person in the car at the time she was re-united with her father.

She testified they then went to "the town landing," where she and "Daddy" rowed out to the schooner Bob in Wychmere Harbor.

She said that later Cyril rowed out with "Mother" and Harold Sawyer and that "Daddy struck a match so that mother could see me."

"It was a little dark," she said, "because the moon was just setting."

She revealed she lost two pounds during her kidnaping experience.

She related how into that afternoon, May 5, the coast guard came into the harbor on a coast guard boat and took her, her "Daddy" and others to the coast guard base at Woods Hole for questioning. At Woods Hole she was interrogated by Dist. Atty. Crossley after she had been given hot soup.

Pupil's Leg Broken

Abraham Tubin, 15, of Poplar st., West End, was in City Hospital today, with a fractured leg and multiple body injuries, suffered in a scuffle with classmates in the yard of the Grant school, West End.

Peggy Gets a Hand by Repeating Gag

Barnstable, June 21—Little Peggy McMath made one obviously nervous of the stand today when Elias Barwick, counsel for the defense, objected to her use of the word "gag" in describing the piece of cloth that was put over her mouth.

The judge asked her to explain just what was done about on the next question of the prosecutor she used the word "gag" again. The ripple of laughter rolled across the courtroom.

'KING' RECORD IN GANG PROBE

paper-wrapped package, which contained some of the records.

"What are the books?" he was asked as he walked to go into the grand jury room. "Your home work?"

"Is somebody kidding me?" the deputy retorted, and hugged his bundles closer.

FLY SHAKEUP LOOMS

As the inquiry reopened today, report was current that a thorough cleanup of the police department, with Gov. Ely exercising his summary powers of removal, might take place in the event the investigation discloses police laxity—particularly in approving applications for club charters and beer licenses.

Under the law the police are charged with the duty of investigating the character and fitness of all persons or associations seeking club charters or beer licenses. In the former case they report to Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook; in the latter to the Boston licensing commission.

It is known that at least one license has been denied to a notorious easy proprietor whose activities long have been a thorn in the side of Police Commissioner Hultman and his legal adviser, Leo Schwartz. Whether licenses have been issued to other notorious characters is expected to be determined by the grand jury.

It was the failure of Deputy Anderson to produce private police records on this investigation and other which caused a short circuit in the probe yesterday before it had fairly started.

TELLS OF CHARTER

The jury already has been informed of the official reports made by the police over Commissioner Hultman's signature to the Secretary of State, it is understood. The first disapproved the application, while the second approved it.

Miss Rose W. Cleveland of Sec. Cook's office testified before the grand jury that Secretary Cook believed to have concerned the issuance of the charter to this night club. She brought in with her official records the nature of which was not learned.

Failure of police to produce their records at the first day of the probe gave rise to the report that they would not co-operate with the district attorney's office in the conduct of the probe.

Commissioner Hultman scoffed at this report. In a statement from his home in Duxbury he declared that all necessary records would be produced when the jury convened today.

Only two witnesses were asked to appear today. They are Deputy Supt. Anderson and Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis of headquarters, who has done considerable undercover work for several months.

BOSTON TO BE HOST TO 'AL'

"Al" Smith will be welcomed by a delegation of Boston Democrats when he arrives at Back Bay Station at 10 o'clock tonight, and will be the guest of the clay during his brief stay here.

Smith is coming to receive an honorary degree of LL. D. from Harvard University tomorrow.

Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath of Dorchester received a letter from Smith today accepting his invitation to be the city's guest, and is busy making plans for a warm reception to the idol of local Democrats.

Gov. Ely is expected to be on hand to greet the "Happy Warrior," and it will be a happy reunion of the leader of the Day State "Old Guard" and the chieftain for whom he worked so hard.

Smith will not be able to stay in Boston tomorrow for luncheon and reception, as Democrats had hoped. He informed Acting Mayor McGrath that he must be back in New York on Friday, and will leave for home immediately after the ceremonies at Harvard.

Smith will confer with McGrath and local Democratic leaders at the Copley-Plaza tonight, McGrath said.

Tomorrow morning Smith will journey to Cambridge to receive from President A. Lawrence Lowell an honorary LL.D., the highest academic honor within the gift of the nation's oldest university.

That politics will be taboo during this visit was indicated when Smith declined an invitation to be the guest of the Democratic State committee. The invitation was offered by Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the committee and newly appointed collector of the port.

"I filled three JOBS by TELEPHONE yesterday"
THAT'S what an employment manager said to us. We had wanted to get the straight of it. We believed that anyone looking for work stood a better chance of getting a job if he had a telephone. But we wanted to be sure. So we visited a lot of employment agencies.
One said: "If two men have equal qualifications for a job, but only one has a telephone, he's the first one we try to get."
A second said: "We rely on the telephone almost entirely to place applicants. People with jobs to fill wait until the last minute to call us. Then it's usually a case of the first one there getting the job. So we telephone to reach applicants quickly."
Another said: "Yesterday we placed a clerk, a short order cook and a salesman by telephone. The first two reported direct to the job and were working an hour after the calls came in."
It was the same story everywhere. Practically every employment agency uses the telephone as the quickest, surest way of getting a person to a new job.

Sky Sheds Tears on Phelan Poem

Summer is here, summer is here,
Oh, let us give a great big cheer.

He was, however, a bit premature for summer doesn't begin until 5:12 o'clock this evening. And tomorrow, not today, is the longest day of the year: 15 hours, 18 minutes.

Then we begin approaching winter," said the pessimistic scribe.

Boston is temporarily, at least, going to escape the hot wave which again yesterday sent the mercury skyrocketing in the West and South. Continued cloudiness tonight and tomorrow, with showers tonight, and not much change in temperature were predicted for Boston.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Week-End of a Colyumist!

I think I have arrived. I mean I think I must be much more important than you or my boss imagine for they barred me from a glorified speakeasy Saturday night. It's really an amusing tale. The place is in Mamaroneck and was formerly the estate of a Westchester millionaire. Several months ago, when the gent who now operates the place in question was still running his Manhattan speak, he called me aside one night and confided his plans to buy the estate and convert it into a swanky club. He asked me what I thought of the plan and I told him it sounded all right. "Wait until I open it," exclaimed the fellow whose name sounds like a well known patent medicine. "The first thing, I want you to make it your week-end home. I'm going to have a place just for my friends—there'll be lots of fun there. I consider you one of my very best friends." In choice Latin accents, of course. Indeed, he should consider me a friend for I once performed a favor for him which he should truly appreciate—and he's always been profuse in his spoken appreciation of that particular favor.

So Saturday night, a bit remorseful because I hadn't taken advantage of John's numerous invitations to visit his new place to Mamaroneck. With me were two friends—one of them, incidentally, a lass whom John admires greatly, to put it mildly. So we drove up—right to the door—and there were John's flunkies from the Manhattan speak but there were no broad receptive smiles on their faces when they spotted me. Instead one of them rushed inside and another stopped me and said, "Just a minute, Mr. Sobol."

There was never a more pained expression in all this wide world than the one that contorted the fellow's face. "But there must be some mistake—you can't come in. You're not a member." Where was John? Why, John wasn't there (peering through the door I saw him in a corner).

So I was barred. Inside, I saw a reformed racketeer with his faded ex-Follies mistress. As I stood talking, there entered an seated gigolo, son of a grocer, with his elderly lady-in-keeping. They had cards, I guess. But I was barred, and it's really a chastening experience.

However, you mustn't think I am resentful toward John. Far from it. He told me it was going to be a snooty place, and indeed it is. To be eligible you must pay $25 a year for membership and wear white pants.

Manhattan is dull over the week-ends in summer. As a result, the true New Yorker remains right in town and visits the night places where he can certain to get a fairly good table and better service than at the height of the season. It's a relief, too, not to have to sit, fidgeting in your seat, while the master of ceremonies drones out the names of celebrities. Gayety, however, flees to the country—and while I, personally, would prefer to remain at home, you don't dig up many paragraphs that way, so Sunday I went out to Max Bloom's estate just outside of Stamford and I may live to regret it, for as I emerged from my canoe, dripping wet. (the canoe had overturned) in dungarees, a basque sweater and over-sized Chinese sandals, I heard a rollicking noise and there stod Lou Davis, the song writer, with a movie camera, making a record of the experience . . . if he shows it around Broadway, I'll have to flee to Tahiti. However, Everett Marshall, the baritone, in complete city attire, overturned in his canoe, too, but that didn't prevent him from singing three songs while Nicky Kempner, the musical director, played the accompaniment. Harry Rosenthal, star of "June Moon," thumped out a Spanish tune and Hamp Fisher, creator of Joe Palooka, with a shawl around his shoulders, danced a Spanish conch dance. Leo Friedl, former world's champion amateur canoeist, piloted Mildred Ivory around the lake in the same canoe which won him a championship 20 years ago.

Around the place were strewn some of Broadway's famous beauties—in bathing suits and pajamas — Neva Lynn, Sandra Rambeau, Jacqueline Logan, Vicki Cummings, Edith Johnson and half a dozen others whose names escape my mind. The famous Spanish soprano, Angelita Loys, sang sad songs, and Minerva Coverdale brought out a huge portfolio, the kind they display in front of theaters, revealing pictures of herself and George White years ago when they were featured in "Hitchy-koo." Incidentally, the pneumonic accompanist for the Mexican Loya lass was gray-haired Gene Schwartz, the gent who wrote the song "China-town." So there you have a sample summer day in the country—and I'm glad I've had been present at some of the other estates around the section, you would understand why Broadway is deserted over the week-ends.

KNAVE'S GIRL

A Tale of Modern Society, Racketeers and Bridge

By Joan Clayton

Patricia Tells Haverholt of Her Father, Who Was a Clever Gambler, Dying Poor

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Unable to find employment, young and beautiful Patricia Warren capitalizes her card skill, at 50 cents an hour, by making a fourth at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, is fascinated by her game. He offers her a position.

NOW READ ON

IN THE MIDST of her youthful enthusiasm, Patricia again was concious of Haverholt's warm and intimate gaze. All at once she was checked a little, vaguely disturbed. A trace of her earlier doubt returned. Patricia Warren was young, but she had learned many hard lessons in her 18 years. Among other things she had learned to doubt the essential kindness of men. She knew something of Julian Haverholt's reputation with women. It was not a good reputation.

Feeling suddenly let down and dispirited, she watched him as he scribbled a check and handed it to Mrs. Sycott. He rose then and said, "Where is your coat, Miss Warren? I'll take you home if I may."

Patricia flushed uncomfortably. "I didn't wear a coat," she said.

"I hate to bother you. It's only a step."

"But I want to take you home."

It was the 27th of December. Outside the night was raw and blustering. Patricia did not wear a wrap because she owned none. The two of them, the man in his heavy coat and the girl in her thin shabby silk dress, made a good looking pair as they stepped into the elevator. Patricia, head high, appeared untroubled by this. In the brilliantly lighted lobby they paused to wait for a cab. It was then that Haverholt touched on the subject which the girl knew inevitably would come up. He looked at her and said:

"Was James Randolph Warren a relative of yours?"

"He was my father," she replied, unconsciously adopting an attitude of defiance. She ended, "He taught me everything I know about cards."

"I guessed that."

HE WAS SILENT

Haverholt said nothing more. Patricia wondered how much more he knew, how much more Eileen Sycott had told him. James Randolph Warren had been a professional gambler, a brilliant card player in the days of whist and early auction bridge, a shabby, familiar figure, often to be seen in the various clubs that were willing to carry him along when he lost. To his credit it might be said that he usually won. Often he won thousands of dollars in a single evening. Patricia could remember the times when her father would rush home, his ordinarily pale face flushed and his thin gray eyes burning as if with fever, his pockets full of money. The cards were running," he would announce to the jubilant household, and for a while his family would live a luxurious existence. But there were other times—the times when he lost. During one of these latter periods, he had died beneath the wheels of a speeding taxicab. He had left his family destitute. Patricia could never forget the agonizing humiliation of those frantic days, when charity officials had come and gone, those days when she first began to hate her step-mother.

Looking up at Haverholt, the girl said bravely, "My father was a great bridge player."

"I know he was, though I never saw him play," agreed Haverholt, as sober as the girl.

Patricia scarcely heard him. Her eyes were dark with memory. As clearly as if he stood before her she saw her father, saw the charming, erratic southerner who had come north to make his fortune and who had, instead, thrown away his life in drink and gambling. His death had occurred when Patricia was twelve. Even before the sudden, shocking termination of her childhood, Patricia had wondered and feared—for her father. She could not help but notice how all the green baize table had seemed to slip away from the tall, stooped, gray-eyed man. James Randolph Warren had scolded his young daughters, he used to sit at home, wearing dressing gown and slippers, a pack of cards spread before him. For hours he would shuffle and deal our the four hands and always he competed changes and he talked of the symmetry and rhythm of cards. Patricia, grave and solemn, would lean against his knees while he explained to her with his own peculiar and burning enthusiasm that in mathematics and in cards alone was there logic.

"Not luck, my child, but logic," he would say. "In the final analysis luck has no chance against skill. Stay in the game long enough and luck will turn, must turn. But stupidity and ignorance can never conquer skill and intelligence—at bridge whist."

SHE REMEMBERED

It was a strange life for a child. It left Patricia with a fear and with a love of cards. She relieved that they had destroyed her father. But sometimes over a card table she felt as she had felt to fight—fascinated and yet fascinated by the beautiful and implacable logic of the game of bridge. There flowed in her veins the blood of a gambler. She knew it. Instinctively she shivered.

"What are you thinking?" broke in Haverholt's voice at her elbow.

"I wasn't thinking," the girl replied slowly, "I was remembering."

Momentarily his glance was questioning. When Patricia volunteered no further information he directed to say: "Can you be ready to move on Saturday?"

"To move?" she echoed, startled.

"You'll live at my place, of course," he advised her lightly. "I'll have my housekeeper clear out a suite for you."

"I'm not sure—" began Patricia uncomfortably.

"My secretaries have always lived at the house," he continued serenely. "It's the only possible arrangement. In your case it will be absolutely essential. You're to be not only my secretary, but my bridge partner as well. The Brownlees Cup tournament takes place in May. We'll need every available moment until then for practice. I warn you I'm a slave-driver."

Patricia was discomfited by his rather high-handed manner. Decidedly she did not wish to move into his Murray Hill mansion. Haverholt's arguments sounded glib and unconvincing. But at that moment the cab arrived. There was no chance for her properly to frame her objections.

HER HOME

Patricia's poverty-stricken home was only one block distant, so strange are the caprices of neighborhood in New York city. She had grown up in the shadow of the Sixth Avenue Elevated tracks, had played her childish games in streets where scrambles was discussed with the pattern of its ties. Tonight the shabby five-story building that housed eight families beside her own seemed more bleak, more desolate than it had ever seemed. A wan street light played across the familiar signs at the basement level, the sign which read: "Mrs. Lillian Warren—French Cleaning—French Tailoring."

In silence the two alighted. Patricia led the way down the three steps to the basement, Haverholt at her elbow. She stepped into the pitch darkness of a tiny vestibule. She was fumbling for the switch when Julian Haverholt caught her in his arms. For a moment Patricia was horribly frightened. The man's mouth pressed down upon her own. His hot breath, the crushing pressure of his arms, the impenetrable darkness filled her heart with panic. She struggled frantically, noiselessly.

"Let me go," she whispered.

"Let me go."

For an instant the noiseless struggle continued. Haverholt, exultant in the conflict, rained kisses upon her cheeks and throat. She heard his low, hoarse endearments and fought against him the more savagely. Then she was suddenly limp and cold he released her. She flashed on the light. Her hair was disheveled, her eyes dilated, her face stricken. Haverholt stood blinking in the sudden illumination, his expression angry and bewildered.

"You—you—" Patricia began steadily.

"My dear little girl," he commenced in a bored tone and then hesitated, ghashed before her hot scorn. "I'm sorry," he offered uncertainly after the pause. Patricia made no reply. She only stared at him with aversion and contempt. Haverholt leaned forward to recover his stick, which had fallen to the floor. Rising, he said irritably, "Stop looking at me like that! I'm not a criminal. I told you I was sorry, didn't I? Well then——"

"Good night," she said formally and turned her back on him.

"Wait a minute," he broke in, startled. "We're going to forget this, aren't we? We're going to work together, aren't we?"

Patricia's breast rose and fell on a long sigh.

"No," she said clearly, "we're not!"

Before he realized what was happening a door banged in his face. Patricia was gone. Alone in the vestibule, the man swore. For once in his life, Julian Haverholt was at a loss. Presently he knocked tentatively. There was no answer. Again he swore. After a moment of deliberation he selected a card from his case. He scribbled upon it.

With the hope of a job gone, Patricia is in despair. The next installment is of compelling interest. The plot unfolds. Don't miss it!

"...The nearest thing to HOME COOKING"

I DON'T KNOW WHEN I have been more pleased or received a more sincere compliment about Waldorf Good Eating Places than the other evening.

• It was during a chance conversation with my tablemate at supper time. "Traveling man" was written all over this keen looking chap. Quietly dressed, he displayed that alert and attentive way about him so typical of those men who travel from city to city, fighting their company's battles, "keeping the wheels turning" back home.

⊙ I like to talk with such men . . . their conversation is stimulating, their news up-to-the-minute, and their optimism a refreshing thing to listen to. Besides all that, invariably they are essentially home-lovers, . . . lonesome for their own fire-sides, longing for their loved ones back home. They are a fine body of citizens.

• This chap told me where he was from and how glad he was his trip was nearing an end. He spoke of the good and the difficult things about his job . . . and looming large among the latter was the problem of three meals a day for a tired and hungry man.

• "We have to be extremely careful of the things we eat," he told me, "a bad spell of indigestion will throw us off for over a week. If for no other reason, these days we just can't afford that."

• "So I have discovered through years on the road, if I stick to one standard of cooking, a standard I am sure of and the nearest thing to home cooking I know, I keep in fine shape. In nearly every city I go there is a Waldorf. I eat there three times a day . . . and I guess I am a pretty healthy specimen."

• That was a compliment!

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

ON ONE THING, AT LEAST, EVERYONE is agreed that the world has lost a radio announcer par excellence in Jay Benton . . . What a riot of laughs he evoked as master of ceremonies introducing his brain child, Follies of 1905, to the Sons of 1908 who are returning to Cambridge this week for their 25th reunion . . . It proved most amusing and original; too bad it could not be immortalized in negative for future generations to applaud.

(Oppenheim photo)

JAY R. BENTON

In the course of a busy life, which includes such ramifications as attorney-general, Mr. Benton has found time to dramatize certain natural talents, the gamut of which he DeMarred for our entertainment and enjoyment on Monday evening . . .

The Man from Home (Indiana), F. Harold Van Orman, a good Orman if there ever was one, was a close second as he followed his lead in the presidential oratorical race . . . John Richardson and Gaspar Bacon as nominees . . . His machine-gun speech with appropriate gestures brought down the house . . .

"From Petticoats to Nudism" brought tears to the eyes of many a bald pate . . . what a break the youths of today get compared to the maze of red flannel the 1908-ers had to navigate through to get their girl . . . said they!

When all the votes were counted, it was found that Mabelle (Bunny) Bratton, leading laborite of the twenty-fivers, won by a large hat . . . Tisbury buried her under with three votes. Richardson and Bacon were demanding a recount as the curtain fell for lack of ideas . . .

Daughters Make Up Snappy Chorus

IN A RED HAIR SHIRT, Harpo Bennett completely hypnotized us juggling the Indian clubs . . . somewhere in his varied if not checkered career bottle-tossing must have excited in him a noble emotion . . . we went into a brood about it until awakened by the Tapping of the little hoofers, daughters of sons of guns of 1908 . . . as fresh and as blooming as . . . if we may coin a simile . . . a rose. In their high hats they took over the Hot-Cha on the program . . .

The love interest was furnished (or should we say upholstered) by the wives of the comrades of 1908 . . . and we said again what we have thought so often . . . Aren't women wonderful? Mrs. Edward Dana in the Mae West finery of the early century had more S. A. in one ruffle than the entire chorus of bathing beauties had in less than the words to describe them.

Far be it from us to wax sentimental over the dear dead days beyond recall, but more than one heart of stone dropped a sigh as the greatest varsity quartet of all times (get that?) came to the mike . . . Lambert Murphy, whose "Comin' Through the Rye" entitled him to first place; Brother Ray, whose dulcet tones still carry the old thrill; Roy Snyder, whom the years have dealt with kindly, and Bob Whiting, sheik (not shriek) of student days, who was pinch-hitting for the fourth member, Shirley Alexander, who was not able to be present.

Even a Bedtime Story Included

AS FAR AS WE WERE CONCERNED they might have "scratched" the rest of the program . . . that was our big moment. Why they didn't send the remainder of the show in to the Met and keep the boys singing until the dawn is what we are asking ourselves . . . ?

Henderson Inches, Chevalier Furber and Bartol Parker told just another bedtime story . . . unlike most of such, there was a bed in everything. In the pure white nighty a la mode of 1908 (we just knew he wore them . . . with apologies to Van Raalte robe de nui and what an apology) Henny exposed enough inches to provoke loud guffaws, as he calmed the nightmares of his beautiful children, B. Parker (the girl) in blonde curls, and C. L. Furber (the boy) sans most of his . . . by this time anything would have sent the returning eighters into gales of mirth. We have reason for being partial about this skit so we reserve comment.

The Grand Finale was swell . . . "Chick" Story and his Harvard Melody Boys filled in the gaps most enjoyably . . . and a great time was had by all of the returning eighters . . .

"Kay" Powers Hostess in New Home

THERE WAS BIG DOINGS OUT Medfield way on Friday night . . . news is beginning to trinkle through. "Kay" Powers assisted her fond father, Dr. George H. Powers, receive the countryside at the house-warming of the new Powers House, which was at one time the abode of the W. H. McElwains . . . Louisa Hopkins, daughter of the Charles Hopkins of Kilham & Hopkins, was also a big help.

Eastmach Photo.

Louisa Hopkins

When the Powers took over the deeds of this estate near the Norfolk Hunt Club they found hidden away on it somewhere an old trolley car, which they have with ingenuity turned into a beer bar (for guests only) . . . if Mrs. Powers elected to stay in at the town house on Beacon st. that night instead of making merry in Medfield she at least can feel she has the approval of the W. C. T. U. Tis well to realize that a sympathetic abandon is necessary at all times for proper conviviality . . .

Notwithstanding convincing denials on the part of the party of the feminine part, we note that ten days ago LeBaron Carleton Colt moved his parlor, bedroom and bath from the Jewell-ed roofiree . . . and the beautiful Josephine is bordering on a state of complete divorce.

Latest Notes of Fashionables

—By Dorothy Whipple Fry—

SUCH A DAY OF PLEASURE AND EXCITEMENT. In fact these June days are an endless round of thrilling occasions and interesting events on the social calendar. Under the shady trees at Raceland enjoying the hospitality of Mr. John R. Macomber of Framingham, many of the prominent social lights of Boston gathered to watch the last day of racing. A delicious luncheon was served in an enclosure near the spacious stables.

Among those gathered for the occasion was Mrs. Augustus Goodwin, neatly tailored and wearing an olive green sport ensemble.

Mrs. Robert Almy, escorted by her exceedingly good looking husband, wore a tan sport swagger coat over a blue and white print frock and blue stitched hat with and intriguing white bow. Let us not miss an opportunity to comment on the asterial perfection of Mr. Almy, in light gray with an attractive shade of delph blue tie.

Mrs. Laverett Saltonstall chose dark blue with wide brimmed hat, a neatly tailored outfit accentuated by touches of white georgette.

Mrs. Clarke Baldwin, former Janice Liggett, wore a neat and chic fitting whip cord suit of tan with a brown felt hat falling in soft lines about her face. Her father, Mr. Louis K. Liggett, who rarely misses a gathering to pay tribute to the horse, was greeted by a group of friends.

Mrs. Mary Louise Almy Adis, tall and dark and extremely well tailored, wore a black sport suit with touches of white. Her dark eyes and hair created a symphony in black and white.

Miss Eleanora Sears dressed in the colors of her stables. The riders of both of her horses wore black and white and she herself sported those colors. A good looking black cloth coat with gray fur collar. Her hat of soft black frock. Her hat of soft black felt sport variety, as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Burrage under a striped parasol partaking of the luncheon. Mrs. Burrage attired in dark blue full sleeves and white cravat collar, neat little blue hat with a white bow and such a good looking boh.

At a table in the center of the grounds Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hornblower, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Withington, Mr. Henry Wainwright and Mr. Henry Hornblower, Sr., partook of the noon day meal. Mrs. Cook looking most attractive and delightful in a green frock and matching hat with a soft gray sport coat cape effect and moduh in line, her daughter, Miss Nancy Cook, in a tan tweed.

Mrs. Lothrop Withington wore a gray top coat with detachable cape trimmed with silver fox and a most attractive black picture hat.

Mrs. Ralph Hornblower was in a fascinating shade of horizon blue tweed with soft green satin blouse and colorful scarf.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne

Sometimes one wonders how much writers and editors had to do with the putting over of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act. "The power of the press" comes to mind. There was a period before 1919 when the magazines printed numerous "confessions" articles written by reformed drunkards who told, unashamed, of their battles with alcohol.

Jack London wrote "John Barleycorn," that famous series wherein he coined the word "jingled" as it related to drink. He confessed that in all his years of heavy drinking he never once was drunk, but he was frequently "jingled." Reformed'cles made a deep impression when they appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

"Moderate' drinkers became alarmed. Perhaps, they said, it was time to call a halt on their own habits indeed, something—should be done about the liquor traffic. The saloons were a danger, a social menace to oncoming youth. Yet no one dreamed at that time how close we were to the passage of a natural prohibition act.

* * *

The women's magazines, in their piety, had always attacked liquor. Down at the Butterick Building, where I was literary editor for several years, I smilingly recall how we never allowed a photograph of a dinner-table to appear showing wine glasses upon it. That would have shocked our hundreds of thousands of country readers. These must not have their sensitive feelings hurt. Every recipe we published was carefully scanned before it went to the printer, to make sure that no mention even of cooking sherry was made. In our fiction we were equally firm about any reference to cocktails; and if a heroine smoked a cigarette, that was enough to cause the story to be rejected. What would Aunt Eliza, out in Peduck, think of her favorite periodical allowing such a girl to grace its pages?

Sometimes, it is true, we bought such a manuscript, but the cigarettes was snatched from the heroine's lips before she got into print; and, if the wicked author complained, we had a perfect apology in readiness. Our adamant rules could not be broken, even in the case of such a famous author as Gertrude Atherton.

Oh, we were very pure in those vanished days. Even lipsticks were not tolerated. Not even powder puffs. And as for rouge—ye gods! never could it be spoken of.

* * *

But glance through the pages of any of the most conservative women's publications today, and what do you see? Lavish dinner tables with two or three wine glasses at each place. It is taken for granted that in every civilized American home claret or sauterne is served, preceded by the stimulating cocktail. The illustrators are allowed, even encouraged, to show young women in the act of lifting ruby glasses to their lips, and wicked flasks are revealed, and orgies are described, with every detail made known.

The opening lines of "Elmer Gantry" are:

"Elmer Gantry was drunk. He was eloquently drunk, lovingly and pugnaciously drunk. He leaned against the bar of the Old Home Sample Room, the most gilded and urbane saloon in Cato, Missouri, and requested the bartender to join him in 'The Good Old Summertime, the waltz of the day.'

A best seller only a few brief years ago. No one was particularly shocked. And no readers now write to editors of household periodicals protesting against descriptions of drinking bouts. There are no more tea parties. There are only cocktail parties—even in respectable ladies' magazines. How times have changed!

The grandmothers who used to complain of the revels of the younger generation now take their own private little nips, and like them.

* * *

THE W. C. T. U. will have to do its work all over again. But now that the old-fashioned wrapper has been superseded by the fancy peignoir, and every woman makes up her face and has learned to drink in decent and civilized moderation, the task will be harder than it was before. Too many converts will have to be made ere another liquor amendment gets into the Constitution after the Eighteenth is stricken out.

WOMEN KNOW HOW TO MANAGE WHEN TEMPERATURE CHANGES UNEXPECTEDLY

They Dress More Successfully Than Men---By Weather, Not by the Calendar

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

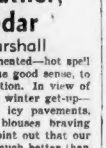
JUNE'S EARLY and late—late and unlamented—hot spell resulted in a happy demonstration of feminine good sense, to which this column cannot resist calling attention. In view of all the mean cracks men make about women's winter get-up—their high-heeled and thin-soled slippers on icy pavements, their chiffon-sheathed ankles and low-cut blouses braving Northern blasts—we, as a woman, wish to point out that our sex know how to handle hot weather ever so much better than men do!

We all dress for it more successfully, in the first place—and we dress by the thermometer, not by the calendar.

Furthermore, if August temperatures occur in the first week of June, we wear August organdies—we don't let 'em stay on a hanger "until the weather settles!" That's the identical phase used by the man we know best, when June's thermometer first soared into the eighties and nineties—and when we implored him to lose no time in getting into a featherweight suit.

Those first fever-heated June days also sent women with the luck to possess beach or country homes scurrying into them. Even if children had to go to school, they were hustled out of the city from Friday night to Sunday night. (And, if women ran boards of education, school children would run fewer temperatures! Every year we listen to the indignant and justified protests of mothers whose perspiring, exhausted sons and daughters must struggle with June examinations, or must get off to a flying start on a new school year during September's inevitable heat wave!)

Women, we believe, are largely responsible for the constantly growing bungalow colonies. They willingly do all their own work in the bungalows—sometimes even a laundry service is unavailable—and they paint and refurbish the small homes yearly, to save money and thus be able to afford the summer-long healthful outdoor life for the children.



Helen Rowland

Oh, yes, I know! The "pickings" are not so good, the men are more so marriage-minded and it's harder to get them to the altar than it was in the good old Gay Nineties; but at least you know what you're getting when you DO marry.

* * *

The perfect frankness and comradeship between the sexes, from their kindergarten days up and on through their college days or office days together, give them a revealing north light on each other which may kill a lot of romantic illusions, but ought to save them a lot of jolts and disappointments.

* * *

In the old days, when there were only two kinds of men—marrying men and "dangerous men,"—a kiss meant either a wedding or a scandal. But the time has passed when a man's mind was supposed to leap right to the altar the moment he felt himself weakening for a girl. Usually he leaps the other way!

* * *

And, in the meantime, the girl with a half-dozen or more men friends has a golden opportunity to make comparisons among the various specimens of the obvious sex. If she makes a fool-headed choice, it is not for lack of traffic lights.

* * *

In these days a man doesn't hear wedding bells and rice slipping down his collar every time he takes a special fancy to a girl. He may enjoy playing around with her just because he finds her amusing or witty or because they enjoy seeing the same shows or dancing at the same places.

It's Smart to Knit and Crochet

By MARGARET MATSON

IT'S GETTING to the point now where you're considered out of step if you can't exhibit some part of your wardrobe saying, "I knitted this myself!"—or crocheted it as the case may be. Apparently it isn't only the dresses that have harked back to other days.

Years ago women used to finish an invitation to tea with "bring your sewing" or "bring your fancy work"—now it's "bring your knitting," or else the invitation to bring it is simply taken for granted. There are ever so many ever so smart persons who are constantly seen with their knitting bags, utilizing every spare moment to complete some garment that they happen to be doing at the moment.

Bucle Popular

Bucle dresses and suits are apparently the most popular at the moment and they look extremely smart when finished. Then, too, there are quantities of little crocheted berets in the making.

Fashion is full of little caps of one sort and another, and if one's fingers are nimble, and her time not too taken up with other things, there is no limit to the number of styles and colors that she might have in her wardrobe.

After all, there is nothing which can so pep up an economical wardrobe as a variety of individual-looking accessories. One forward-looking person has made a little package that contains the wool, the needles and the patterns for a smart fez hat that one can purchase for almost nothing.

Various Colors

Naturally there are a number of colors and one might have several—which is a fashion in itself. Really smart people do that sort of thing; they find one hat or one suit and have it copied in several colors. The Countess de Beaumont recently purchased six tennis dresses all the same style, but in different colors. And she is an exceedingly chic person.

Aside from dresses, suits and hats, one might proceed to make herself a bathing suit (the pattern and instructions for the one pictured may be had upon receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope), the might choose any number of interesting sweaters, coats, jackets, scarfs, accessories.

Or as a matter of fact, she might leave clothes entirely and branch out in the home-furnishings field.

MISS FAIRFAX ON LOVE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a beautiful nurse. I met her while she was on a case where I was employed. I fell in love right away. It was love at first sight, I guess. I don't know whether she loves me or not. I am 21 and she is 23. I want to go regularly with her, but she insists that I am too young for her. She is thinking it over. I want your opinion of it. Does age matter so much when you're in love?

H.

Dear H: No, I don't think two years difference in ages matters in the least. You tell me the young lady is thinking it over, which is always a hopeful sign. Why not wait for the results of her decision before you begin to worry over what may happen? And don't forget the most heartening proverb: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." Good luck.

Girl's Place to Invite Him

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

There is to be a dance at our school soon to which I would like to ask a boy (who goes to a different school) to take me. My aunt thinks I should tell him there is a dance, and then wait for him to ask me. I maintain that I should ask him to accompany me instead of "hinting," which would probably embarrass us both, and almost forces him to ask me, since he is very polite.

CONSTANT READER.

I agree with you in this, for in a way you are a kind of hostess at this dance, since it is to be given at your school.

Flowered Frock of Organdy

Women who know their fashions will go in for cottons and field flowers in a big way this Summer.

The Raquel Meller-like silhouette at the left, is one you can adopt if you're "that slim way" in type. The effect is fresh, frilled and feminine. At the neckline, two lovely jade clips are placed. Three huge ruffles swish at the feet, the first starting halfway below the knees, the other two growing fuller and fuller until they end in a tiny train in the back, trailing lightly with each step.

The other field-flowered organdy gown at the right, was selected because the silhouette is generally becoming to every figure. Exaggerated ruffles cover the shoulder—and add lots of charm. The skirt is enormously full, yet restrained. A full bunch of vivid poppies accent the bright field flowers of the print.

If the picture is to be completed, there are frilled organdy gloves to match the hats and gowns.

Face Massage Can Banish Wrinkles

By HELEN FOLLETT

HERE IS an easy way to banish those tell-tale wrinkles which will creep in around our eyes and mouth and across our forehead. It will take time—about 15 or 20 minutes each night—but it will be well worth the effort.

After your skin has been thoroughly cleansed with cleansing cream and skin tonic, or soap and water if you prefer, take a small bowl and pour into it a generous amount of muscle oil.

Putting on Oil

Dip your fingertips in the oil and pat it on the face in this manner: Begin with the fingertips of both hands side by side on your chin. Pat gently in a line upward toward your ears. Place them again on your chin and follow a line upward toward the temple. Replenish the oil on the fingertips as often as necessary to lubricate the skin thoroughly.

Place the fingers now at the corners of the mouth and pat upward toward the temples. Then again toward the eyes, and so on until the entire jaw and cheek areas have been covered. This pat may be rather brisk, though not so hard as to break the tissues, of course.

Next place the fingertips on the forehead just over the nose and pat outward toward the temples, and follow in toward the nose, taking care to pat ever so gently around the eyes.

Tap Gently

Continue these pattings over the face for about 10 minutes or for as much of that time as you can spare. Tap very, very gently over the eyelids, using plenty of the oil. When you feel that you have given your face sufficient treatment for the time, begin, on your neck.

Again use plenty of oil and pat upward from the base of the neck. Pat quite briskly under the skin where the double chin is likely to begin. And don't neglect the back of the neck. When this is finished, wipe off the excess muscle oil and retire. The treatment is best if you can leave some of the oil on all night or for a few hours after the patting.

If you wish us to suggest a good muscle oil to use, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Helen Follett, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Neglect Cause of Danger in Mastoiditis

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

NOT LONG ago I happened to overhear the conversation of two men. One of them was deeply concerned about his son who had been operated upon for mastoiditis. His friend remarked that "a mastoid operation is always successful, and even though the brain abscess is exposed the wound will close and heal." This was welcome news to the worried father, because he had heard many less reassuring stories regarding the mastoid operation.

Dr. Copeland

Mastoid disease or "mastoiditis," as it is commonly called, is a dreaded affliction. But if parents better understood the ailment, I am confident that a great deal of apprehension and unnecessary worry would be avoided. Unfortunately, there is much confusion concerning it.

The mastoid forms the bony prominence you can feel behind the ear. Within is firm cancellous tissue, covering there are cavities or honeycomb-like cells. These are separated from the brain by a very thin layer of bone. When mastoiditis is neglected there is always danger of the infection traveling to the brain.

The inflammation in mastoiditis is caused by germs which come from the nose or throat. As a matter of fact, it is a frequent complication of influenza or pneumonia and may follow a severe cold. Infected adenoids or tonsils may be complicated by mastoid involvement.

The sufferer first complains of earache. This may be followed by a profuse discharge of pus from the affected ear, with relief of the earache. But, unfortunately, if the discharge from the ear suddenly stops, the pain returns. Pretty soon the pain is localized behind the ear. Sometimes there is swelling in that region. The victim is restless, uneasy, and runs a high fever.

The diagnosis of mastoid disease can sometimes be confirmed by means of the X-ray. This should always be resorted to when the diagnosis is difficult to make and the symptoms are vague and misleading. In all cases, the ear should be carefully examined and cultures made of the pus if there is a discharge.

Now Is the Season to Make Most of Low Price of Eggs in Tasty Dishes With Cheese

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WITH EGGS so attractively priced and so acceptable for warm weather cooking, we certainly should be making the most of Madam Hen's offerings. Eggs are breakfast dependables and combined with cheese make a splendid meat substitute for other menus, especially Sunday night suppers.

And speaking of cheese, I'm reminded to remind you to keep the soft cream cheese that comes wrapped in tinfoil wrapped in brown paper if you want it sweet and unstained. Thus wrapped it will keep well in your refrigerator for a week or more. Wrap other cheeses in wax paper or cheesecloth wrung out of vinegar and place in a covered dish in a cool place.

Inexpensive Rabbit

A delicious and inexpensive rabbit is made by cooking 2 tbsps. of quick tapioca in 1 cup milk in a double boiler for 15 minutes, stirring frequently. Season with ½ tsp. of salt and a little paprika. When the tapioca is clear, add 1 cup grated cheese and stir until the cheese melts.

Another inexpensive cheese and egg combination is anchovy toast. This toast is spread lightly with anchovy paste (which you can buy in a tube for 22c or less). A poached egg is placed on each round of toast and a thin cheese sauce is poured over the egg. This cheese sauce is made from a foundation white sauce in the proportion of 2 tbsps. or butter smoothed into 2 tbsps. flour, 1 cup milk, ¼ tsp. salt and a dash of pepper, all cooked together until smooth. To this add ¾ cup of grated American cheese and a dash of Worcestershire.

Broiling Tomatoes

Tomatoes combine beautifully with eggs, especially if the "hive apples" are broiled or fried. Try cutting these ones in half crosswise, sprinkle with salt and pepper and broil in a well-greased broiled under a hot flame until partially cooked. Place these tomato slices on rounds of buttered toast and put scrambled eggs on them with a slice of crisp bacon on top.

'New Deal' Plan Upset Program of Europeans

By M. S. Rukeyser

New York, June 21—The "New Deal" domestic economic program evidently upset the calculations of both the British and the French, who intended to dominate the course of the World E conomic Conference at London.

With the A m erican d e parture from the gold standard and Great Britain left w h atever tactical advantage it had in a fluctuating c u rrency subject to the whims of management.

Likewise M. S. Rukeyser the growing premium of the French franc in terms of dollars and pounds sterling tends to affect the international position of France.

Accordingly, the pioneer among the leading countries in devaluation, having cut the gold content of its currency to the tune of 80 per cent, France now tends solemnly to defend the concept of a fixed currency, tied to gold.

Underneath the surface discussions is a conflict between two major schools of thought. One, tending toward sensible and restrained economic nationalism, would place the chief emphasis on policies designed to bolster up home trade and to raise living standards. The other would place the stress on foreign trade, and the development of alien markets.

John Maynard Keynes, in the Yale Review, significantly points out that reasonable economic self-containment permits nations to make experiments in economic and social progress undisturbed by international considerations. The heterodox British economist points out:

"The policy of national self-efficiency, although not an ideal to hope for in the long run, is needed for the immediate future to guarantee each country its freedom while attempting to find a new mode of political economy.

"I sympathize with those who would minimize, rather than those who would maximize economic entanglement between nations. Ideas, knowledge, science, hospitality, travel—these are the things which should of their nature be international. But let goods be homespun whenever it is reasonably and conveniently possible, and above all let finance be primarily national. Yet, at the same time, those who seek to disembarrass a country of its entanglements should be very slow and wary. It should not be a matter of tearing up roots, but of slowly training a plant to grow in a different direction."

'NEW DEAL' AIMS AT CONTROL OF PRODUCTION

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

MOST of the floor traders are reported doing well these days as the ticking quiz turns on either side of the market. Only a few doing long to one position, feeling resultant trends are not industriously defined. Oils, rails and motors are forecast in some quarters to be the next ones upward.

Carloadings Gain on Major Rails

New York Central and Pennsylvania hold up a short day following announcements of car loadings gains. Central's loadings hit the highest mark reached this year. The Pennsylvania system had total loadings of 53,390 cars for the June 17 week against 50,809 in the previous week and 60,866 in the same period last year.

Rails Are Gaining in Favor Finally

A number of buyers are coming into the railroad group now that the car loadings figures are getting so plentiful and the outlook for the carriers has so strongly improved. A broker, who has been interested in the group, and he was unable to get the rank and file of his clients to take an interest in rail shares a month ago and now most of them feel that they should have at least one railroad stock in their portfolio.

General Electric Orders Increase

Special buying of General Electric which spread into other electrics manufacturing shares, was the feature of the market of a dead pickup in the company's incoming business. They indicated the volume of new orders has risen for seven consecutive weeks and is now only 17 per cent behind last year. According to the same source, the rate of bookings promises to match the 1932 level before the end of the summer. The company yesterday confirmed reports of a general 3 per cent wage increase.

June Auto Sales Above Last Year's

Detroit, June 21 (INS)—The weekly registration report of R. L. Polk & Co. indicated car sales for May were approximately 183,000 units, 40 per cent higher than April, 20 pe rcent above May of 1932, and 11.5 per cent over the total for June, 1930, last year's best sales month.

The trade paper, Steel, reported that production and steel is now moving into the Michigan motor plants than at any time since the beginning of the depression.

Cotton Spinning Industry Has Gain

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The cotton spinning industry was reported today by the census bureau to have operated during May at 112.5 per cent of capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 85.7 per cent capacity during April this year and 83.3 per cent capacity during May last year.

Public Service Has $26,768,193 Profit

Public Service Corp. of New Jersey and subsidiaries for the twelve months ended May 31, 1933, report balance available for dividends and surplus of $26,768,193, against $30,233,510 for the same period last year, a decrease of $3,625,317.

Through the adoption by the Senate of the bill temporarily increasing from $10 to $15 the amount of wages exempt from attachment by trustee process on claims for necessaries furnished a defendant or to his family, Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner has scored another victory in his battle for relief for the "little fellow."

STATE ST. Hears:

That the market, as judged by the averages, has moved off from the highs in manner decidedly suggestive of a double top. We have yet to witness a test of its staying power around the 91-3 level and will reserve decisive regarding the trend until it tests out there. News developments are not particularly favorable. In any event, the sidelines and patience have not cost anything so far, and we may as well follow the same procedure for a session or two longer.

Sterling

The fluctuations of sterling continue to reflect the anticipated developments at the London conference. More important is the fact a depreciating dollar lost its power to stimulate share prices late yesterday. It suggests a complete discounting of inflation for the present

It is either this or the possibility of momentous developments at London that prevented stock prices from staying their usual fireworks. As previously outlined, the domestic policies of the administration present stabilization, now. But failure to stabilize threatens to disrupt the economic conference.

Franc Shaky

The stormy petrol of the economic conference is France. She feels that stabilization must be achieved before much of anything can be accomplished. In the meantime the position of the franc is becoming less secure on its throne of gold. It could easily be allowed to slip off.

While there have been a few bearish grabs, bear opportunity plays down the conference at London, it has, on the whole, been built up in the public mind. Consequently, either might have a temporarily unfavorable effect on the markets. In time, of course, domestic affairs would again steal the limelight. H. E. B.

BOSTON STOCKS MOSTLY OFF

Moderately lower prices ruled in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. The list was irregular in the forenoon but profit taking, which appeared shortly after noon, accounted for losses ranging from fractions to 2 or more points in leaders. Carriers were able to maintain earlier gains.

Boston & Albany was about 3 points higher and Chicago Junction preferred was up more than 2. New Haven and Boston & Maine were fractionally higher. Maine Central preferred was down 2 points. General Electric and Warren Brothers showed fractional improvement.

Edison Electric was a point better on the curb exchange. New England Telephone and American Telephone were moderately lower. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred showed a point loss. United Shoe and Bigelow Sanford were down a point or more.

First National Stores recovered an early loss of well over a point. Small decreases were recorded for Gillette, Pacific Mills, Pond Creek, Pneumatic and United Fruit. Merganthaler dropped more than a point.

Boston banks are notifying depositors that in compliance with th new banking law, signed June 16 they are discontinuing interest on demand deposits, effective as of June 16.

Boston Wool Price Showing Increases

Wool prices in the Boston market continue firm, despite heavy receipts of staple from the growing regions, and despite increased offering of wool on which government loans have been made. Last week receipts of domestic wool in the Boston area totaled 4,449,200 pounds, which is about the peak amount for the shipping season. Prices on most grades are up 1 cent or two this week, although on the finest Ohio delaines the gain is nearer two or three cents a pound.

Sees Higher Gross for Union Pacific

Union Pacific Railroad's business is currently exceeding 1932, Carl Gray, president of the carrier, stated. He said:

"Our business in June has continued to run ahead of a year ago. If the remainder of the month continues at present levels, our June gross should make about the same relative comparison with a year ago as was registered in May."

Mr. Gray would not make a prediction as to June net operating income, pointing out that expenses usually increased materially around the middle of the year. Increased movement of lumber and forest products are contributing to Union Pacific's improved showing, he said.

Exchange Listings Increase in Month

New securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange in May, seven in number, amounting to 10,540,420, compare with three in April totaling $2,813,620, and two in May, 1932, of $615,800, the smallest on record. May listings were entirely stocks, as were April and May, 1932 listings.

Largest item was 85,570,678 par common of Owens-Illinois Glass, in exchange for smaller glass or allied companies.

STAPLES SHARE BUYING FAVOR WITH STOCKS

By FRANK H. MELOON

It is becoming daily more and more obvious that staples, especially raw products, such as cotton and grain are to an increasing degree sharing speculative buying favor with stocks. Washington plans for inflation are the subject of the closest scrutiny, with opinions divided regarding their merits. J. P. Maher, former financial editor of the New York American, now partner in a leading Stock Exchange house tells us:

"The cotton curtailment plan announced by the Department of Agriculture is a rather indefinite ruling and is going to be more difficult to put into effect than that on wheat. It can hardly have much effect immediately, but it constitutes a club that can be used if any disturbing break in the price is threatened. The Government is going to find it much more difficult to stabilize cotton than most other commodities."

New England's gigantic recreational industry actually begins in this section an expenditure of about a half-billion dollars, according to Col. William A. Barron of Crawford Notch, N. H., chairman of the Recreational Development Committee of New England Council. The Council is launching a tremendous campaign right now to expand this industry, with the slogan, "Invade New England." Wm. A. Barron

Governor Joseph B. Ely genially endorses the movement, and a message to the legislature urges the governor think the Council should be congratulatrs for this idea.

The New England summer tourist industry received its first great impetus more than a quarter of a century ago, when the late Gov. Nahum J. Bachelder of New Hampshire, as head of the National Grange, originated the idea of "Old Home Week," which recalled thousands of New England's scattered sons and daughters.

SPECTATOR Says:

As long as Washington has given its blessing to higher prices, Wall Street isn't getting any new case of nerves over reactions. In addition, business is coming along to provide a stronger supporting influence. It would take a piece of real bad news to revive last week's jitters.

Gold Rumors

The rumor is around again that France may tumble off the gold standard. But the old worry about this possible development is gone. The bulls argue that this would mean world-wide inflation, which is what this country is shooting for.

We hear there's a strong crowd in Johns Manville, which e plains its recent antics They've had a break, though, for having hoarded a lot of low water stock . . . There has been considerable institutional liquidation in St. Paul bonas. The road's earnings for the last month are said to be at the rate of 2 per cent on the adjustment bonds.

Here and There

We understand New York Central's net this month is coming up to President Williamson's optimistic prediction.

This, you will recall, was a million net after charges . . . Those who sold the rails because of Coordinator Eastman's intervention in the wage eut situation must be a little disheartened . . . If all the rails have to put them up is another wage cut, then they're too high right here.

* * *

There's some hot tipping on the cuts . . . One Wall Street group has accumulated 2,600,000 bushels of wheat and expects to get over $1 a bushel for it.

The Wilmington crowd is still picking them up on dips . . . American Can's beer container is something for Ocean Bottle to think about. The Tidewater Associated pool has started operations in earnest, 'tis said.

PRICE CHANGES FOR LEADERS ARE MIXED

New York, June 21—Price changes for leading shares were mixed in today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The wandering dollar rested on European wayside and domestic financial markets, uncertain following their moderate setback of yesterday, were inclined to slow down their pace.

The British pound sterling, which has lately become a barometer for stocks, dropped back about 6 cents and other foreign exchanges were mildly reactionary.

TRADING SLOWS UP

Share trading opened up with a rally, but buyers began to disappear and prices eased. The tape was about two minutes behind floor transactions at one time, but t soon began to drift idly. Most leading stocks, after moving aimlessly in the forenoon, showed some degree of firmness later. Wheat, corn and cotton were a trifle higher, although lacking in material exuberance. Bonds were rather listless.

The automobile shares responded fairly well to the news of more states joining the prohibition repeal column. Gains of 1 to almost 2 points were recorded by U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol, National Distillers, Owens-Illinois and Crown Cork.

The rail displayed rallying tendencies, with Santa Fe, Lackawanna, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Delaware & Hudson and Southern Railway all gaining up fractionally to around a point. Case, Celanese, Hat Corp and Western Union were about 2 higher. Du Pont, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, International Harvester, Standard of New Jersey, Socony Vacuum, Johns-Manville and Continental Can improved.

EASTMAN AIDS CARRIERS

The carriers were aided by announcement of Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman at Washington that progress was being made in the railway wage negotiations. He said he felt hopeful of an early as well as satisfactory conclusion of a pay reduction conservery.

Steel production in the United States has reached 50 per cent of capacity for the first time since April, 1931, "Iron Age" reported today. A week ago the output ratio was 47 above week.

Electric production for the week ended June 17 amounted to 1,578,-101,000 kilowatt hours, largest since the week ended Feb. 13, 1932. The gain over a year ago was 9.5 per cent, the seventh successive weekly gain over comparative weeks of the preceding year. New England shows an output of 153 per cent larger than a year ago.

Output of electric energy of the electric power companies of American Water Works & Electric Co. for week ended June 17 totaled 34,638,-000 k. w. h., an increase of 5 per cent over the output of 32,230,000 k. w. h. for the like week of 1932.

Investories in the United States again are fewer, the total for the week ending June 15, according to the railway wage organization. It

A DANDY ST BERNARD FAR AWAY FROM HOME

Business is picking up—there's no depression, according to reports from the Animal Rescue League as regards stray dogs. More than 50 dogs are now in care of the Animal Rescue League waiting for owners. This beautiful giant St. Bernard, seemingly happy, pokes his head through a window in his dog prison. Maybe you know the owner of this dog.

A QUARTET OF ORPHANS PEEP AT PHOTOGRAPHER

There are fox terriers, great Danes, English bulls, English setters and mongrels of all types at the Animal Rescue League. They were picked up by police of Boston and surrounding towns. The records of the Animal Rescue League show that almost twice as many dogs are being picked up this year than there were last year. Dr. Wesley A. Young, chief veterinarian of the league, stated that most of the dogs picked up are claimed by their owners in three days. (Boston American Photo.)

Fisherman Found Dead in Ship Bunk

The beam trawler Boston, which has been fishing on Brown's Bank off Nova Scotia, will arrive at the Fish Pier early tomorrow bearing the body of Timothy Romard, 60, member of the crew.

Word was flashed to the owners of the trawler that Romard had been found dead in his bunk.

Roxbury Boy Is Sought in Texas

Aid of Texas authorities was asked today by Boston police in a hunt for Hyman Levine, 18, of Devon st., Roxbury, who has been missing from his home since last Jan. 16. Members of his family believe the youth may have hitch-hiked there.

NO DEPRESSION IN DOGDOM

No matter how business is in any other line, it's picking up for the Animal Rescue League—even if the Animal Rescue League does have to go to the dogs to keep its business flourishing.

Business is making a big noise just now at the League in Carver st., the noise coming from the throats of nearly four-score canines who went and got themselves lost or who were found on the streets without a license tag.

There's an English setter in the bunch, a giant St. Bernard, mongrels galore, a brown chow, a gaunt-appearing fox terrier, a Great Dane pup and various other types and styles of doggies who would like to be home again but who are temporarily out of dog luck.

According to Dr. Wesley A. Young, chief veterinary at the Animal Rescue League, the number of dogs being picked up this year is running far ahead of that a year ago.

If the animals taken in by the League collectors are not claimed by the owners within five days, then other homes are found for them—so if your pup is missing go in to Carver st. and look for the familiar wag of his tail.

U. S. POLITICAL FREEDOM CURB SEEN BY YOUNG

Political freedom will have to be sacrificed to some extent if the people of this country wish to regain economic independence, Radcliffe seniors were told today by Owen D. Young, nationally known business leader and once mentioned as a possible Democratic nominee for the presidency.

Young was the principle speaker at Radcliffe's 54th commencement held at Sanders Theater, Cambridge, where 236 degrees were awarded by Ada L. Comstock, president of the college.

"In order to regain our economic independence," Yong declared, "we are, in appearance at least and probably in fact, making some sacrifices of political freedom.

"While they are called emergency measures, and so paper temporary, some of the restraints now imposed seem destined to remain permanently."

After reviewing the gradual delimitation of human freedom through the ages for the benefit of society, Young continued:

"We are now learning apparently that we must enlarge our restraints and controls over the economically powerful individual, and more particularly over the economically powerful group, not only to protect, but to develop the economic well-being of the weaker, single man."

Because business has refused to regulate its own affairs, Young said, he sad no escape from business falling under political control. But he said he wished first to be convinced that such control will be successful.

Alice Bourneuf, of Chestnut Hill, an honor student, was chief marshal with Edith Thacher, of Princeton, N. J., assistant marshal.

Tonight, members of the alumnae will hold a banquet at Hotel Statler at which today's graduates will be guests.

Advice to Graduates to Enter Politics Due for Stir

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

CONNECTICUT'S GOVERNOR, Wilbur L. Cross will probably stir up a certain amount of criticism by his recent Harvard Phi Beta Kappa address. Any serious and intelligent advice is always sure to stir up a lot of unfavorable comment, particularly if, as in this case, it goes against some favorite shibboleth or taboo of the public at large.

R. E. ROGERS

Governor Cross knows college men. He was for many years a professor at Yale before he became a popular and successful governor. He taught English literature—the English novel to be precise—and his marked success as a liberal administrator bears out one of my favorite contentions, that a man who knows literature has a distinct edge on the man who merely knows life.

Governor Cross urged college men to go into politics. That advice is, of course, a chestnut. But this year, with Washington dancing to the tune called by college professors, it seems rather less academic than usual. Governor Cross, it is true, makes the usual mistake of the middle-aged and the elderly in criticizing the college curriculum as being too classical. The students, he says, should have more politics and economics.

Politics No Gentleman's Livelihood

As a matter of fact, American college education is no longer "classical" even in the loosest sense of the word. Eighty per cent of our college graduates leave college without having even a bowing acquaintance with the old classical curriculum. Government and economics are much more largely elected. Only the Catholic colleges make any pretense to giving their men a classical training. That may be why many of their graduates do go into politics. It is perfectly possible that the best training for politics is the classical course, which trained most of the great names in our American history.

But that is not the point which will cause controversy. Governor Cross says exactly what Ogden Mills said at St. Paul's earlier in the month, that a young college man going into politics ought to be reasonably well fixed. With the genius possessed by the average man for getting things hind-side-before, this will at once be hailed as a conviction that only rich men should go into politics. You will note, however, that the Governor said nothing of the sort.

Put into plain language it boils down to something like this:

"If you are a young man with first-class brains and a good education you ought to go into politics, in order to be of service to the state. But it costs money to get into politics. Politics pays very small wages compared to what business pays.

"Moreover, being an educated man and a gentleman, you will not think of political service as a means of livelihood. You are not one of those people who can make more money holding office than you possibly could earn in any other activity. Therefore, either you must have some money behind you or you must be content with a very modest living."

English Plan Only for the Rich

It was rather far-fetched for the governor to mention either Thoreau or Mahatma Ghandi as illustrations of the poor man of high ideals in politics. He might have come nearer home than that. He might have mentioned Calvin Coolidge's long service for Massachusetts, with a wife and family, a rented home and a room in the Adams House, paid for by a modest law practice. Or he might have mentioned "Al" Smith rearing a large family for 12 years on the salary of a New York assemblyman. Both were eventually rewarded by the party, but it was a long, slow, hard pull to the top.

The theory of the rich man in politics is a debased version of the old English theory that office should be held only by gentlemen of independent means. There were several corollaries to that theory which are no longer valid. In the first place, members of Parliament were not paid until comparatively recently. A man without independent means simply could not serve his country. Today in America political salaries, although by no means adequate for competent men, will support life for men of modest tastes and unselfish dedication to the public service.

In the second place the English theory implied that public service was a tradition in a gentleman's family. The boy grew up in an atmosphere of politics. He had all the inside dope on it. He came into political life not an amateur but already a professional apprentice. But that is not possible in America. A rich young man comes into politics as inexperienced as a poor young man. The chances are a hundred to one that there is no political tradition in his family. There are a few outstanding exceptions. The Adamses, of course. The Roosevelts, of course. There are minor examples; The Lodges, the Bacons, the MacVeaghs, etc. But they are few and far between.

It's Class for Class

In the third place the theory was that the man of independent means was a country gentleman, not in trade, free from business connections, therefore not likely to use his office to make money. But a well-to-do young man going into American politics will almost invariably be found to have connections in business and industry. Although he may not make a cent out of his political connections, his class is almost sure to profit. He will act in behalf of his class, just as the so-called "professional" politician will act in behalf of his class. All that is perfectly natural and proper. In fact, it is the only way politics works. But it ruins any argument that the rich man will be any more impersonal in his viewpoint than the poor man. Or any less impersonal. Both represent the people in terms of their respective classes. Which is what the fathers of the Constitution intended.

But Governor Cross went on to point out that although the high elective offices are open, as ever, to brains and wealth (although there will always be comparatively few who profit by those opportunities), there are more and more offices of other sorts available all along the line. He did not particularize, but I take it for granted that he meant the permanent administrative jobs in government, controlled by civil service and so not at the mercy of political expedience. These often need men of high intelligence and the best and broadest background in affairs. He is speaking of the increasing disposition on the part of wise executives to take their appointees from the class of men who could probably make more money in business than in politics and who can bring something constructive to politics. And finally, he was thinking of the increasing reliance on experts, the research men, in every field of life, who are most likely to come from the college graduates who have money enough to devote themselves to scholarship.

The next few years are going to make or break the scholarly expert in politics. If they succeed, we may have the opportunity to establish here in America a caste of permanent civil servants, experts in the best sense of the word, broad in knowledge, wide in social and scholarly background, deep in disinterested devotion to the public service. Such a civil service caste is the backbone of the British Empire. We could do with one like it!

ROLLER SKATE DERBY ENTRIES POUR IN

Young and Old Here's a Chance to Show Your Skill

Boston roller skaters have received the announcement of the Boston Evening American's derby with enthusiasm.

Hundreds of persons of all ages from young boys and girls to old men and women who enjoy the pastime of roller skating, are preparing to enter the big derby scheduled for next month and make a try for one or more of the prizes. Amateurs only are eligible.

Not only is the Boston Evening American going to give prizes to the speediest skaters but it will also award prizes for the funniest and most attractive costumes. A costume parade on roller skates will be one of the big features of the derby, finals of which will be run off in Boston Arena, Massachusetts ave. and St. Botolph st., Back Bay, on the afternoon of July 22.

Well, boys and girls, what do you think of it? There's going to be lots of fun, isn't there? You don't have to use very much imagination to reach that conclusion. It's up to you to get busy and make costumes if you want to win one of those special prizes. The more unusual your costume is, the better chance you'll have to win, so get busy.

ALL CAN PRACTICE

Of course, there will be music during the progress of the derby at the Arena. Six big amplifiers, in use every afternoon and evening at this popular roller skating rink, will be used to make the music loud enough to drown the noise of skating.

George V. Brown, manager of the Arena, will permit persons who plan to enter the American's roller skating derby to practice at the Arena any Saturday morning from 9 to 12 for ten cents. For this sum skates will also be furnished. All skates used at the Arena are new things to be regarded by many as the best made.

In order that all who wish to enter the contest may have a good opportunity for plenty of practice Mr. Brown will also permit prospective contestants to skate at the Arena on Monday or Thursday afternoons for a dime, with use of skates included.

RACES IN PARKS

Boston Arena is the largest roller skating rink in New England, having 20,000 square feet of skating space. It is open Sundays as well as week days.

Preliminary races will be run in four Boston parks on Saturday afternoon, July 15. These parks are Charlesbank playground, Leverett and Cambridge sts., West End; Paris st. playground, East Boston; Strandway, South Boston (roped off area near Columbus Park beach), and Franklin Park Greeting, from entrance of Frank in Park to the bird house. Those who win in the park contests will compete at the Arena.

Boston park department officials, headed by Chairman William P. Long of the park commission, are co-operating with the Boston American to make the derby a success. Roller skating is one of the pastimes fostered by the park department.

The American will announce additional information daily relative to the derby. Contestants should get it daily to learn latest details.

Clip coupon on this page fill it out and send your entry at once. Don't delay. Now is the time.

GET INTO AMERICAN ROLLER SKATE DERBY

If you hear a little extra noise in your neighborhood today, have no fear, it will in all probability be some of your neighbor's children practicing for the Boston Evening American Skating Derby. We are showing you two Jamaica Plain youthful skaters. They are Betty King, 48 Parkton rd. and David Miller, of the same address. And can they skate? You bet! Speed galore is theirs.

2 Boston Doctors Warn of Baby Peril

Chicago, June 21 (AP)—Expectant mothers who diet to retain slim figures create an anemic condition which is bad both for them and their unborn children, Drs. Maurice B. Straus and William B. Castle of Boston City Hospital and Harvard Medical school told medical scientist today at the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The anemia disappears after birth of the child, the doctors said.

MRS. HASCALL STUNNED BY SENTENCE

Son in Machine Shop, Hazel Leland a Laundress

Stunned by the shock of a jail sentence and weak from repeated fainting spells during the night, Mrs. Florence C. Hascall, Back Bay gift swindle widow, was in East Cambridge House of Correction today, still under care of a physician.

Mrs. Hascall, in Middlesex superior court yesterday, was sentenced to two years in connection with the Gift Family swindle, while her son, Coburn Woodbury, received a sentence of nine months and Miss Hazel B. Leland was given 18 months.

The instant she heard sentence pronounced, Mrs. Hascall collapsed, but her son and Miss Leland took their sentences calmly. Through the night, the widow had several other hysteria and fainting spells, but today the county physician, Dr. William Clancy, said that, although weak, she was somewhat calmer.

MISS LELAND, IN LAUNDRY

Woodbury and Miss Leland had two boiled eggs, bread and coffee for breakfast today, while Mrs. Hascall had only a few sips of orange juice before dropping her head back on her pillow.

After breakfast, Miss Leland, clad in the regulation blue gingham dress, gray cotton stockings and black shoes, was put to work at a mangle in the jail laundry, while Woodbury was taken into the machine shop for instruction before actually going to work.

Mrs. Hascall still faces trial in Suffolk County on indictments charging larceny. Dist. Atty. William J. Foley said he was not sure the case would be reached for trial next month because of the large number of cases to be heard.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe, who previously had recommended a very light sentence or even probation for Miss Leland and Woodbury, appeared surprised at the terms imposed and immediately sought to have the woman's sentence reduced, pointing out the government case would have collapsed but for her aid.

SENTENCES TERMED JUST

Judge Walter L. Collins pointed out that in his opinion the sentences were all fair and just and would stand. He then ordered court adjourned.

Friends and more of the investors in the scheme were women who handed over their money in the expectation of big profits. The "benefactor" of the scheme was characterized by the judge as a "myth and a fraud."

2-WAY POLICE RADIO NEAR

Police radio two-way communication was a step nearer in Boston today when officials of the Radio Corporation of America set up a sending station at Headquarters and equipped a cruising car with a sending and receiving set to try out ultra-high frequency experiments.

The high frequency waves approach the speed of light, making reception possible in areas where communication was hitherto impossible, a R. C. A. official pointed out.

The cruising car will tour West Roxbury, the district farthest from Headquarters to test the sending set. The receiving sets will have no difficulty in picking up messages anywhere in Greater Boston, but the sending sets at present have a radius of only two miles.

When two-way communication is eventually installed, it will mark another victory for the Boston Evening American, which has advocated the plan for several years. The system will give police a running start on gangsters and racketeers, enabling police to send and receive messages in seconds that now sometimes take hours.

WANTS BOARD TO PICK NOMINEE

Request that the Democratic city committee, as the dominating factor in the coming campaign, call together all candidates for mayor, give each a hearing and then make formal indorsement of one man, was made today by City Councillor Francis E. Kelley of Dorchester.

Kelley, who plans to announce his candidacy for mayor in August, unless early action is taken by the city committee, will make formal request for such action to Chairman John W. Newman.

Friends of Dist. Atty. Foley and Atty. Frederick W. Mansfield have become increasingly active during the past few days.

It is believed the principal reason for this is the aggressive campaign being waged by associates of Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath of Dorchester and former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell.

Representatives of the Foley and O'Connell groups are devoting much attention to small Democratic precinct organizations which came into existence during the Roosevelt campaign last year and which are generally increasing in size and membership.

It cost $413,195,092 for government in Massachusetts and her political sub-divisions for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1931—or $96.32 per person—it was disclosed today in a survey by the Census Bureau at Washington.

In the same period, the combined debt of the state and the sub-divisions, less sinking fund assets laid aside to meet such debt, was $436,599,547, or just $101.77 per person in the Commonwealth.

The survey figures cover operation of the state government, 14 counties, 355 cities and towns, 48 fire and water districts and four other civil divisions.

Of the total $322,926,887 was spent by the cities and towns, $74,055,631 by the state government, $15,799,781 by the counties, and $586,869 by fire and other civil divisions.

Public revenues collected for the state and the sub-divisions totaled $387,446,314, an average of $80.37 for each resident. Of this amount $287,424,096 was for the cities and towns. $74,020,060 for the state, $15,310,482 for the counties, $665,931 for the fire and water districts and $25,745 for all other civil divisions.

General departmental costs were distributed as follows:

General government, $23,562,517; protection to person and property $41,758,724; health and sanitation, $22,118,014, conservation of natural resources by state government $1,850,663; highways, $26,441,054; charities and corrections, $49,103,706, schools, $81,607,734; libraries $4,134,039; recreation, $7,517,326 and miscellaneous, $14,206,123.

TACK HARDWICK, WIFE MAKE UP

Friends reported today that the rift in the marital lute of Huntington R. (Tack) Hardwick and his wife, the former Margaret Stone, had been mended.

Mrs. Hardwick, who left for Reno early this month, was reported to have returned last night and it was said she had given up her intention of seeking a divorce in the Nevada city.

The couple were married in Marion, July 13, 1915, two weeks after he was graduated from Harvard. The ceremony took place at Great Hill, the summer home of the bride's parents. She was a daughter of the late Galen L. Stone, of a well known Boston bond house.

During the past several years the Hardwicks have made their home in Buckminster rd., Brookline.

Horse Is King Today ↑ French Back DeGlane
At Rockingham Park Bowser Is Delighted
Great Race Meeting ↓ Over Greatest Show

By JACK CONWAY

The horse is king at Rockingham Park today where more than 800 thoroughbreds, valued at more than a million dollars, are ready to make new racing history.

MR. BOSTON

Legal pari-mutuel betting has made the Rockingham meeting possible. If New Hampshire had not passed the racing law, Rockingham Park would still be a white elephant.

New Hampshire will benefit from racing by a State tax on the money wagered at the pari-mutuel machines, and also from the money that will be spent within its borders by the thousands of visitors.

Legal betting is something new for this part of the country, and this fact will tend to make the Rockingham meeting a greater attraction than it otherwise would be. Persons from all parts of New England will journey to the splendid race course at Salem, N. H., to see the thoroughbreds in action.

Opening day will have special interest. From all parts of the East will come racing men who will want to be on hand when the horses get away from the barrier in the first race.

Racing is not exactly new at Rockingham. Two years ago Lon Smith and his associates tried to conduct a meeting with open betting. It attracted such attention that the authorities stepped in and clamped down the lid on the betting. This caused the backers of the track to close it. Then they started their fight for legalized betting. Their efforts resulted in a victory.

The fact Massachusetts rejected betting at race meetings will help the Rockingham Park proposition. It is left without competition, and if the meeting is conducted properly it is certain to prove a success. Lou Smith has had wide experience in staging race meetings in this country and in Canada, and promises Rockingham Park the type of racing that will rival that at Churchill Downs, Aqueduct, Hialeah, Belmont, Arlington and the other famous race courses.

French Fans Will Root for a DeGlane Victory

When Henri DeGlane receives his opportunity to regain his lost world's heavyweight wrestling championship in his bout with Ed Don George at the Boston Garden on Friday night, he will not lack for rooters. In addition to a group of French fans who will come here from Montreal in Lucien Riopel's party, there will also be French rooters on hand from Marlboro, Fall River, Lowell and other New England cities.

Jack Delaney, Lou Brouillard and other French-Canadian boxers who have shown in this city have drawn heavily from the mill towns of New England. DeGlane has a stronger hold on the French than either Delaney or Brouillard because of the fact he was born in Paris.

DeGlane continues to rule a 10 to 7 favorite for the title bout. It is one of the few times when a challenger has carried the money. This is due to the fact DeGlane twice won from George before their last bout. In the last contest George gained the victory after DeGlane had his right collarbone shattered.

Bowser Says Show Is Greatest He Has Ever Arranged

Paul Bowser had a very satisfied look on his face when I dropped in at his office at No. 115 Chauncy st.

"Tommy Parle just told me," said Bowser, "that we are having a record sale. There are two reasons for this. Friday night's show is the best I have ever arranged, while the popular price scale of $1, $2 and $3 is fitting the times. There are 10,000 seats at $1 which gives every fan an opportunity to see this great show.

"George and DeGlane by themselves with an ordinary supporting card would have sold out the Garden. When the Christmas Fund committee and myself succeeded in matching Jumping Joe Savoldi and Nick Lutze for the semi-final, everybody started talking about the show. I honestly didn't think Savoldi and Lutze would consent to wrestle under George and DeGlane. There was also a date Savoldi had on the Coast which had to be set back.

"Man Mountain Dean then asked for an opportunity to prove he is still a great wrestler, and I paired him with Panther Joe Malcewicz.

"I then succeeded in matching 'Gentleman' Jack Washburn and Earl McCready. A year ago Washburn battled DeGlane in the final of the Christmas Fund's show. Now he gladly accepts a spot on the supporting card to get into the running again.

"This is a show which I want to see myself. I have made arrangements for Joe Alvarez to keep the grapplers moving from the dressing rooms so that I can park myself in a ringside seat and see what happens"

Random Shots at the Target

Whitney's hitting should prove of great help to the Braves . . . The former Phillis is a natural .300 batter and a splendid fielder . . . Lee has also displayed batting punch since he joined the Tribe . . . Judge Emil Fuchs and Charley Adams are doing everything possible to produce a winner at the Wigwam . . . The New England track and field championships will be held at Woburn next Sunday afternoon under the direction of the Elks .

ODDS SOAR

The scratching of a number of horses by morning, including favorites, sent the early odds sweeping skyward, but the best horses on the card of seven races remained in.

The opening race still loomed like a sure thing for Jobs coupled in the betting with Voieplane. Late odds on the C. T. Grayson and R. S. Clark entry were quoted at 4-5.

A favorite was scratched out of the third race, Calgary Kay, and odds on Promethidon came down to 3-5 placing him with Dancing Mack and Mecat as the favorites in the event.

Benderling continued to rule the choice in the Rockingham, a claiming race and next big event to be speed handicap. The inside info made this a two-horse race, with only Brass Monkey qualified to give Benderlog any trouble.

Part of 20,000 people expected at the track started to flow in early and were attracted by the horses working out on the track. It was surprising how rapidly the track started to dry after the heavy rain, and everything is set for the thirty-first.

ACE JOCKEYS IN BACK

Some of the best jockeys who could be found on any track in the country will help to add to the keen competition in this event. Riding the Whitney horses will be Legere and O'Malley; Leiserman will have the leg up on Rand Wagon, and Bobby Morrison who was among the first arrivals at the track will be in the saddle for the McCuan stable, riding Sobiena.

Schaefer will be up on the other McCuan horse, Flag Bearer, and it will be interesting to watch the courageous comeback of Jockey Hilton "Rabbit" Dabson in this race.

Dabson who will ride Kakapo was seriously injured at Bowie, Md., and at the time of the mishap it was feared he would never ride again. However, he will be very much in the running if the mount has half the courage of its jockey.

The track will be in capable hands with Milton as starter, and Tom Thorpe in charge of the judges' box, and of course with Munroe and Smith bustling to make it a tremendous success. And no hitch is expected in the mutuel department with Mortimer Mahoney handling this end of the track.

Thorpe Keeps Busy

Hale, hearty and anxious to see the meeting at Salem, N. H., get under way in grand style, Tom Thorpe, presiding steward was a busy fellow around the track this morning, catching up with the scratches and added entries.

Eddie Mack, boss of the press department, says he hasn't seen so much excitement since the days in the Argonne forest.

Lou Smith, owner of the track and treasurer, was resting comfortably after being confidently tugged from one end of the grandstand to the other by the 2000 that were looking for job.

Ralph Russell of the Fairbanks stable was originally a Lynn boy. His right name is Worsell but everyone he put the trail to follow the horses, he has been known as Russell. Those horsemen simply couldn't remember Worsell and insisted upon calling him Russell.

Gates Please Starter

Starter Jim Milton was pleased with the gates that will be used in getting the horses lined up at the track today.

Sheldon Fairbanks after a three year tour of practically every racing plant in the country, said there is a wonderful chance of Rockingham becoming the prettiest turf spot in the U. S. if the present meeting is a success.

Legalized Wagering Makes N.H. Bow Today

By DAMON RUNYON

Salem, N. H., June 21 (US)—For the first time in the long history of the old Granite State, New Hampshire will have horse racing with legalized betting, beginning today.

A large number of distinguished Eastern turfmen have journeyed to New England to be present this afternoon at Rockingham Park, the beautiful little track at Salem. Starter Jim Milton yells "Come on"

The track is 32 miles from Boston, on which it must depend for most of its patronage, and six or seven miles from Lawrence, the famous mill town. The meeting that begins today and runs to July 22 is the culmination of an effort to establish racing in New Hampshire that covers a period of many years, and the expenditure of a large amount of money.

$500,000 SPENT ON TRACK

It was this same track at Salem that the millionaires, John A. Drake, and "Bet-a-Million" John W. Gates, built at a cost of $500,000 years ago, only to be closed down by the state authorities after they had run a couple of days.

The track lay idle for years. Then a couple of years ago, and apparently under some assurance that everything would be all right, Bill Dwyer of New York decided to put Rockingham Park back on the racing map.

With Lou Smith, owner of King's Park in Montreal, and William A. Gallagher, Dwyer acquired Rockingham, spent $250,000 in improvements, and started up a meeting. It lasted about three days, of which there were with a form of pari-mutuel betting. Then the New Hampshire authorities clamped down again.

The third and last day of the meeting, without betting, drew 15,000 spectators for a gate of around $26,000, and while his associates were disgusted with the situation and stated no more of New Hampshire, that attendance and gate determined Lou Smith to stick around.

N. H. OKAYS BETTING

He took over the stock of his associates, reorganized the holding company of Rockingham Park, and began an effort to get a racing bill through the New Hampshire Legislature last winter.

Few thought he had much chance to succeed, and when the news came from Concord that the Legislature had passed a very liberal bill, it was in the nature of a sensation.

Gov. Winant refused to either sign or veto the bill and it became a law by default so to speak. It gives the State of New Hampshire 25 per cent of the pool "take," which Lou Smith believes will total between $8,000,000 and $12,000,000 in the two meetings that he intends running this year. On the basis of a "handle" of that size, the state will do all right.

Incidentally New Hampshire will have the calm satisfaction of knowing that it is getting most of the money from neighboring Massachusetts.

Saints Want Game

GOLD STEP HELLOS FANS

Gold Step, Sheldon Fairbanks' racer, which won several inaugurals this year, hellos the fans. This handsome racer will appear in the Rockingham Park meeting, which opens today. Gold Step has made plenty of golden steps for Fairbanks, with his victories. And several at long odds, too. Maybe he'll come through again in the current meeting.

HENRI-DON VICTOR TO GET BROWNING TILT

CURLEY TO BID $25,000 FOR N. Y. MAT GO

By RINGSIDE

New York, June 21—Gov. James M. Curley [illegible] to offer [illegible] to Deglane-Ed Don match for heavyweight wrestling [illegible] to meet Jim Browning, [illegible] champion bout in Boston [illegible] the Fourth of July.

The victory of the Deglane-Browning bout at the Boston Garden Friday night against Browning would definitely settle who is world's champion," said Curley today. "Savoldi licked Londos, then dropped a decision to Browning. This brings the question of who is champion down to the winner of the Deglane-George bout and Browning.

DON'S CLAIM STRONGEST

"New York state recognizes Browning, but I am willing to admit George has a stronger claim. He can trace his title back to Gotch and the other great mat champions. I expect to be at the ringside in Boston on Friday night to personally make my $25,000 offer to the winner of the Christmas Fund Show."

Asked who he was picking to win, Curley said:

"That's a tough one for any man. DeGlane was a great champion and only lost his title on a fluke. George, on the other hand, is an aggressive fellow, who is always forcing the issue. Maybe I'd favor the Frenchman a bit on account of the way he has stood up in tight spots."

SHARKEY'S TIMING GOOD

I saw Jack Sharkey work out at Orangeburg, N. Y. The champion boxed with Hans Birkie, Chester Matan and Justin Strutis. His timing was good while he showed plenty of fire when punching. Sharkey weighed 207 pounds before starting his workout, and 205 pounds when he finished.

The ticket sale for the big scrap is booming. If the show is a sellout it will draw $400,000. Various estimates place the gate at between $250,000 and $400,000. George Smith, who was in charge of the ticket sale of the Schmeling-Baer bout, has named $300,000 as his figure.

DeGlane Prepares Defense for Crown Go

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Tipped off that Ed Don George might borrow a page from Joe Savoldi's book and try to fatten him with a double drop-kick in their clash for the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund at the Garden on Friday night, Henri DeGlane today made preparations for any unexpected move by the champion.

DeGlane at 22 pounds, his best wrestling weight, and in the topmost condition, is sure that he can beat the Don.

That is, if George doesn't change his methods. DeGlane is a shrewd workman. He is always wide awake and when the rumor that George was practicing a double drop-kick reached his slightly geraniumed ears he went to work all the harder.

The semifinal, Joe Savoldi vs. Nick Lutze (causing a much talk about town as the [illegible] melee, Jon Malcewicz vs. Man Mountain Dean and Chief Straus vs. Fay McGrath over a pair of other pipes.

Ticket prices range from $1 to $3 with 10% [illegible] at one dollar plus the federal tax. And tickets at Paul Revere [illegible] Chauncey st are going faster than the new 3.2 beer.

Collegians Play at Longwood Club

Mary Cutter of Jackson, Emily Lincoln of Smith, Catherine Boyden of Vassar and Mary Tregarden of Mt. Holyoke were among the entrants who [illegible] tournament wins in the [illegible] women's intercollegiate tennis tourney at Longwood Cricket club today. Doubles [illegible] billed to start [illegible] afternoon.

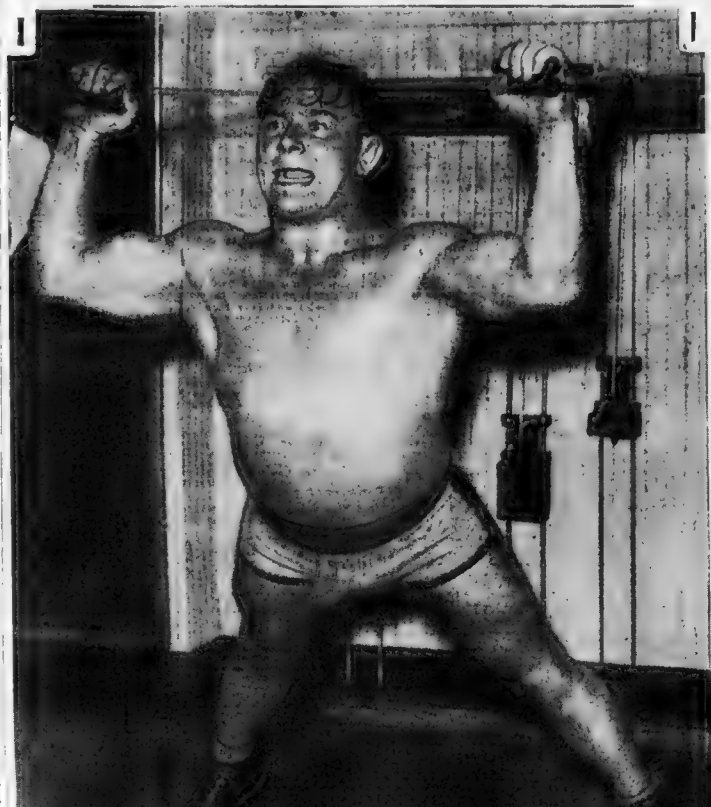
THE FLOWER OF FRANCE COMES BACK A TIGERLILY!



Just brimming with vim, vigor and vitality is Henri De Glane, the Flower of France and former heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. Henri's so enthusiastic about his coming bout with Ed Don George, for the title at the Garden Friday night, that he's ready to tear the wall down and toss it over his brawny shoulders at you. Henri's already installed a 10-to-7 favorite to knock George off the championship pedestal. And the American's Christmas Basket Fund show will be a sellout.

WEATHER MAN GIVES BREAK TO TWI NINES

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

According to the official scorer of the Boston City League, in five weeks only three rainy nights had interefered with twilight baseball schedules. Only three rainy evenings in five weeks seems like a Twilight Leaguer's dream.

Curtis Fullerton, former Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia National pitcher, has been pitching some great ball for Roslindale. He already disgorged one no hit, no run five-inning game.

Strecker Ace Tosser

Another no-hit pitcher in the City League is Lefty Strecker of the St. Thomas team, who recently held the Mulveys hitless in an official seven-inning game and blanked them, 12 to 0.

Under Teddy Donavan, the Roslindales have won seven of their last eight games. George Walker promised a winning team and it looks as if George was keeping his promise.

Pilots Aid Charity

Bob Brickley and Jim Croke, directors of the Dorchester T. T., deserve a bunch of orchids for voluntarily cancelling last night's scheduled game with St. Alphonsus in order to permit a charity game to be played instead.

The Neponset Wanderers have a strong box quartet in Ed Mulligan, Charlie Bird, Barney Curtin and Lubarski, a corking infield in Ed Towle, Drorett, little Jim Sullivan and Capt. Charlie Taylor and a strong outfield in Kelly, Hansbury and Pettitt.

Dunlap Takes Match by Narrow Margin

Hoylake, Eng., June 21 (AP)—George T. Dunlap, Jr., leading United States entrant in the British amateur golf championship, narrowly escaped elimination in the fourth round today as Alarlo De Forest of the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews carried him to the 19th hole before succumbing.

Keeping pace with the American, C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Canadian holder of the United States title, continued his brilliant play, to defeat J. Walker, 6 and 5 and Roger Wethered, former titleholder and one of the British favorites, won a fourth round match with Henry Howell, 2 and 1.

Earlier in the day the long-driving Cyril Tolley, holder of the championship in 1920 and 1929, and an American resident for several years, won from T. C. J. Manners, 2 and 1, with a rather erratic display.

Two American residents of London, Robert Sweeny and Douglas Grant, advanced to the fourth round but Charles Sweeny, brother of Robert, was defeated in a third-round encounter by H. N. M. Fogg, 1 and 1.

Robert Sweeny brother of Charles, and Douglas Grant, both Americans living in London easily won their third round matches Sweeney defeated H. M. Dickson of Gasgow, 5—4 and Grant won from A. B. S. Legate, also of Glasgow, by the same margin.

Fish 'n' Game

By WIN BROOKS

The annual run of sea salmon in Dennys River, Maine, is under way, according to word from L. F. Comber of Dennysville . . . Dennys and the Pembrooke are the only streams this side of the Canadian border up which the Atlantic salmon fight their way each year . . . This fish average 4 to 15 pounds, and all the fishing is by wading . . .

Francis A. Niccolls and Ed Place are heading north into Canadian reserves for the big speckled trout fishing . . . Local fishing parties taking salmon, trout and bass at Senec and Fluttermilk Pond in Maine include Rev. Father Hoffman and Dr. Walker of Cambridge and Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Babcock of Boston . . . The latter took 31 bass on the fly one afternoon . . .

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Chamberlain of Nahant also took some nice fish . . .

Miss Katherine Harlow, daughter of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Association president, caught a six-pound and a 4½-pound striped bass at Buttermilk Bay Sunday, while fishing with her father . . . George Bishop, who started down for the stripers one day last week, discovered upon arrival that he had plenty of rods with him, as usual, but all light fly rods . . . So he went over to Red Brook, instead, and there had one of his most enjoyable days, taking 35 trout on the dry fly and 23 on the wet; four of the total were rainbows . . . Later he went to the bay and caught a nine-pounds bass.

Good fishing is just starting on the Margaree, Cape Breton's famous salmon water . . . When Albert Rao, 12, of Danvers, grows up he should be able to catch some good fish . . . Sunday, on his first real fishing trip, he landed a 59-pound monkfish . . . Canadian Government tests prove that the more varied diet of trout planted in lakes causes quicker growth than the almost exclusively aquatic insect menu of trout fry planted in streams . . .

M'KECHNIE TO HELP M'GRAW

New York, June 21 (AP)—John McGraw will have the advice of two other active managers and a squad of 25 players when he leads his all-star National League team against a similar army from the American League at Comiskey Park, Chicago, July 6.

Club owners of the National League, meeting here yesterday, approved McGraw's plan to assign coaching jobs to Managers Bill McKechnie of the Braves and Mickey Carey of the Dodgers.

The club owners took advantage of the opportunity to discuss possible changes in the 1934 playing schedule, including a later start.

Warriors, Cubs at S. Boston 'Night'

With members of the Boston Braves and Chicago Cubs in attendance, St. Augustine's Holy Name Society of South Boston will hold its annual baseball "night" and smoke talk in St. Augustine's Hall tomorrow night.

District Attorney William J. Foley will be master of ceremonies. Maranville, Berger, Gowdy and Handy Moore will be some of the Braves present. Kiki Cuyler, Charley Root, Bill Jurges and Woody English and other Cubs will attend.

EAGLES UPSET H. C., TO TAKE SERIES, 17-8

Worcester, June 21—Boston College walloped the favored Holy Cross nine, 17 to 5, at Fitton Field, to capture the annual Jesuit College baseball series for the first time since 1927.

Three Crusader pitchers faced the Eagles as the visiting team connected for 19 hits. Joe Mulligan, the conqueror in the Memorial Day 15-to-1 win, left the fray at the end of the second inning and was followed by Ed Quinn, who went to the showers in the fifth. Little Joe Stine finished the game.

ROY WILD BUT WINS

Bud Roy, twirling his last game for the Eagles, was erratic, giving the Purple 14 passes. In the second inning Roy forced in two runs by bases on balls. Roy contributed to the attack by banging out two hits.

In the second chukker the Eagles batted around as seven men crossed the home plate. Earl McIntyre finished his collegiate career in a glory by whaling out a home run to left field in the second with the bases loaded.

CRUSADERS THREATEN

The only time that Holy Cross threatened was in the last half of the ninth when it put four runs across through Roy's wildness and errors of substitutes injected into the fray for their letters.

Following the game John Horgan of Haverhill, sub catcher, was elected to captain Holy Cross. The Eagles elected Charles Kittredge of Framingham, first baseman.

Barry Red Sox Pilot? Just Talk!

Jack Barry, coach of the Holy Cross baseball team, today had denied persistent reports that he would be the next manager of the Boston Red Sox, replacing Marty McManus.

Barry has been a frequent guest in Boston of Collins and Tom Yawkey, millionaire owner of the Red Sox, and has been offered a job as a scout.

Defeated in the opening game at New Haven yesterday, Harvard hoped to even the count when it clashed with Yale in the festive Commencement Week game at Soldiers Field this afternoon. Because of the 2:30 parade of the alumni and other interesting features the game was canceled to get under way at 3:30 o'clock.

The entire Harvard pitching staff paraded to the mound in an attempt to stem the tide of Blue runs at New Haven but the Elis outscored the Crimson 5-3. Today Coach Fred Mitchell shook up his lineup again and drafted Eddie Loughlin from third base to hurl.

If Harvard could win today and tie up the series it would complete its first season as a member of the Eastern Intercollegiate loop, with an average better than .500 and in third place behind Yale and Columbia. It also would necessitate the playing of a rubber contest at New Haven on Saturday afternoon.

SOX TRY PAIR WITH TIGERS

Special to Boston American

Detroit, Mich., June 21—Those roisterous Red Sox from Boston hit town today with hopes of hitting some terrific thumps and landing a double-header from the local Tigers this afternoon.

Now a game and a half out of the cellar the Red Hose, according to Manager Marty McManus, have set sail for the sixth inning of the American League ladder and they're not going to stop until they get there.

Detroit is the sixth rung occupant, seven full games ahead of the Red Sox. Yet, the way McManus' club is going, the lead might be slashed before nightfall.

After being shut out in two Sunday games by Cleveland the Sox came roaring right back to take two straight and to split a four-game series with the Indians.

Widow of Famous Inventor Will Address American Women Regarding Work

By N. P. T.

Womenfolk of the nation are attracting attention in the radio realm lately and to a rather marked degree. Naturally the broadcasters note with the rest of our modern social and educational institution heads, that women occupy a tremendously important place in this whole scheme of world-wide rehabilitation now under way. As a matter of fact, it has always been so. Friday afternoon next, Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, widow of the noted electrical wizard, is scheduled to deliver a special matinee message to American women (WEEI) at 3:30.

* * *

For her topic, Mrs. Edison chooses "Leisure after many years of Drudgery." It seems logical to assume there will be much significance attached to what this illustrious wife and mother will have to say. Vastly changing trends in a fast moving civilization have inspired the coast to coast arrangement of a special series of such talks planned under auspices of the National Women's Council in the United States.

AIR ARGUMENT

In keeping with the spotlight turn toward the fair and square sex, an interesting debate holds forth by radio in Boston tonight. Over behind Cambridge Lyceum walls, the subject, "Resolved, that the emerging of women from the home into politics, business and the professions is a regrettable feature of modern life," is to be debated and in rare debonicked. Four men undertake the task—their courage is to be admired. David J. Fitzmaurice and Atty. John F. Mack maintain the affirmative. Joseph Thornton and Atty. John H. Morris support a negative viewpoint. Station WLOE is offering this feature between 9 and 9:30 o'clock, they say. Splendid to know, but somehow a half hour seems hardly enough time.

* * *

RISING RAPIDLY

Radio stardom may not mean what it used to but three young men definitely headed in that direction, bear the names Dave Grant, Gordon Graham and Bunny Coughlin. Loudspeaker patrons aplenty claim they are already away out in front of many network "mike" combinations and that their "Funnybones" bit is not only as good, but actually better than a lot of featured offerings perhaps more highly touted. In any event, the three unquestionably clever chaps are being lured from broadcasting a lot recently, making considerable extra money at

VACATION GIRL'S ATTIRE

Informality and wearability seem to be the theme for the very newest ideas in vacation wear as shown in Gilchrist's Fashion Show. "Round the Clock" costumes, active sports, spectator sports, commuters' clothes, afternoon and evening fashions as well as an exciting wedding finale created a great deal of interest at the show from 12:30 to 3:30 today. A vacation atmosphere predominated, featuring the newest ideas in vacation luggage. Even the last word in summer cosmetics and "vacation make-up" were shown.

Daily True Story

Love Endures All

SHE SPOKE and fumed, but he sat there, quiet, unmoved and as if he did not hear a word. Her words were poisonous and filled with a hatred of a hysterical woman.

Her voice sounded cracked and strained.

Every word cut her husband —scratched his heart, cut into his soul as from her dried throat poured streams of accusations, curses, abuses and plaints.

Suddenly she sensed a peril in his silence. Her stream of abuse was cut short. Instinctively she felt that her husband was not silent any longer, even though he did not speak.

She wheeled about and, facing him, demanded:

"Where are you going? I'm not going to stay up and wait for you all night. I'll shut the door on you!"

"Lock me out!" he answered calmly. "It does not matter. I'm not coming back. I can't endure your nagging. I'm finished."

STOOD PARALYZED

She stood there paralyzed with fear. She flung open the door in a rage and cried: "Get out, I screamed. "I'm warning you not to leave. You'll come back and plead and it'll be too late!"

But he continued on.

Slowly she walked back into the apartment, locked the door and felt all alone, a prisoner of silence.

"He's gone. Oh! What am I going to do. Everyone will give him credit, everyone will agree with him. My own sisters will stick to him."

She began to realize she loved him. She knew it now that he's gone. And he loved her, too. "Oh, why can't I control myself? Why can't I treat him kind and gentle as he deserves?"

She repented. She figured his return. She promised herself she'd never abuse him again never.

She began to feel forsaken, beaten, vanquished. She feared the shadows, the walls—they knew all the wrongs she had committed against him. She ran to her phone and called her sister.

"Doris, is Charles at your house," she screamed into the telephone. "He left me, he's gone."

"What's the trouble now?" her sister asked. "Can you have a call over homes in annoy him? Isn't it enough at your home? Don't you ever pity your husband?"

SHE UNDERSTOOD

"But Doris, dear, you don't understand," she pleaded. "I understand everything," her sister cut in. "You have to call over homes in annoy him? Isn't it enough at your home? Don't you ever pity your husband?"

SHE UNDERSTOOD

"But Doris, dear, you don't understand," she pleaded. "I understand everything," her sister cut in. "You have to call over homes in annoy him today? What did he do now? But don't worry," she added, "he'll be back and then you'll be able to continue your nagging."

"But Doris, he won't come back, I tell you. He left me," she pleaded.

Even her sister didn't side with her.

She undressed, crawled into bed and tried to sleep.

Hours passed and she remained awake, tossing nervously. She was thinking of telephoning the police. Perhaps he committed suicide, she reasoned. Suddenly she heard the key in the lock. She jumped up from her bed.

Her husband entered, his head bent. She looked into his face and saw a broken man, pale, tired.

"So you came back? What did you come to take—your belongings?" Wait, I'll help you pack. Where were you all night? I demand my rights and want to know where you spend your nights? What do you think I am?" Do you think I'll sit all night waiting for you?"

"Look, Look how he throws his coat there. It's the third Time and again I told you to hang up your coat. What are you—a baby?"

That's a step toward parity. The British recently installed soda fountains on fighting ships.

The next thing is an international agreement to fight all naval engagements with confetti.

The Dollar Lure

False Conception

"DOLLAR STABILIZATION AT ANY PRICE" is a false conception of the country's needs.

The United States slipped out of its gold noose in order that a new value for the dollar might be dictated by our requirements.

To rush right back to "stabilization at any price" would curtail, if not terminate, the revival which has been experienced thus far since March 4.

The revival has been predicated on belief the dollar would be allowed to seek a level, domestic and international, which would represent the basic price at which reasonable prosperity could be restored to the United States.

A good start has been scored. More than a million workers have regained jobs. Prices for commodities have risen. Wages in many instances have been marked upward.

In short, business has revived. But the revival enjoyed must not blind Washington to the dangers inherent in a policy which might stifle the tendency toward further improvement.

The business revival has resulted primarily from Government action. This action may be deemed inflationary, reflationary, or just plain humanitarianism. The fact remains that thus far the program has been successful.

The dollar has "cheapened," to be sure. But only now is it universally agreed that an alteration in the dollar's value was essential to break the deadlock of depression.

Severance of the dollar's link to inflexible gold valuation brought about the spectacular recovery in commodity prices, which everyone concedes is the initial essential for economic revival.

Of course, our abandonment of gold was unwelcome to foreign nations. For the first time we have been approaching equality with their depreciated currencies in the struggle for world trade.

But more than that. Our internal economy, burdened with the vast debt structure, required readjustment in the valuation of our monetary unit.

Last week it was proposed that the United States agree to a "currency truce," which, in effect, would "stabilize" the dollar in relation to the British and French currencies.

Utmost significance attaches to the fact that this suggestion emanated from the British and the French. Of course, they would like to see the United States agree to stabilization. We have, by our independent action severing the gold link, established ourselves almost as equal competitors with the French and British.

Therefore, tempting bait is held out to us to stabilize. Will it not be easy, urge the foreign soothsayers, to support the dollar at prevailing levels? Will it not work to the advantage of all the world if the almighty dollar is held virtually unchangeable in price?

The lure hides the realities.

The United States has undertaken a vast major alteration in the dollar's valuation. It is too early yet to perceive accurately what the new valuation of the dollar should be.

When we have secured the objectives of increased price levels, jobs for our millions of unemployed, and when our debtors shall have been afforded an even break in the matter of the dollar's value, then and then only will the country be prepared to agree on a more or less permanent revaluation of the dollar.

It will require more time for ascertainment of the dollar's proper new valuation.

The Administration is wholly warranted in forbidding the American delegates to the Economic Conference from entering any "temporary" or permanent stabilization agreement at this time.

Boost N. E. Resorts

Write Friends to Spend Vacation Here

INVITE A FRIEND.

This is a campaign that was instituted by the Boston Evening American to promote the Summer resort business of New England.

Now the New England Council has taken it up, we are glad to say.

Anybody interested in the welfare of New England can engage in this campaign, it is so easy and so productive of beneficial results.

Write a letter, or postcard, to some friend or acquaintance elsewhere in the country.

Tell him, or her, that New England is the ideal playground of the world, from her silvery beaches on the rock-bound coast, through the pastoral lands to the great lakes and forest-topped mountains of the interior.

The New England Council will supply you with a booklet which capably describes the varieties of New England beauties and their attractions.

You will be performing a service to your friend by persuading him, or her, to enjoy a vacation in this Switzerland of America. And, of course, you will be performing a service to yourself, because the income from the recreation industry is widely diffused by it.

The Summer resort industry has an annual income of $500,000,000, and should be promoted because of its extreme importance to the success of New England.

We Curtail, They Waste

Watch Public Officials

For three years past the average man was obliged to curtail his expenditures.

If he was a rich man he probably gave up an auto or two, kept his private yacht tied up at the wharf and restricted his social entertainings.

If he was a working man he probably bought less food, less clothing and less recreation for his family.

There was one thing they both would liked to have bought less of. That was government.

They cut out the extravagances, and even some of the necessities, over which they had control.

But they paid more and more for the extravagances over which they had no control: the extravagances of government. The beach-warmer, the windjammer and the political henchmen had to be kept in their jobs, even at the expense of food and clothing for the taxpayer and his family.

Times are better. Income is higher. Costs are moving upward again. The cost of government is always moving that way. Keep your eye on the national, state and city officials. See if they reduce expenses now. They didn't when times were bad.

New York Day by Day

Starting the Day Right

NEW YORK, June 21—I frequently wonder if other scribblers to limber up mornings, crank up mentally as it were, find dashing off a friendly letter beneficial. To me it is like clearing the throat before after dinner speaking. For years I've had a half-dozen such patient correspondents.

O. O. McIntyre

An old-fashioned idea, but grand fun! Among the most faithful have been Meredith Nicholson, George Ade, Lloyd Scholl and Gilbert White in Paris. In addition we often exchange extracts from others which are passed to Dick Berlin, Lee Olwell, Ed Nolan, Henry Bell and Cobbie.

In a workaday whirl it's grand to "play post time, the coach is coming!" A carry-over from small-town days. I had a post office lock box when I was 11 years old and was a constant subscriber to "Send Dime and Get Big Mail, Lock Box 48, Department J, Muscatine, Iowa."

The gang often trailed from school to watch me open the box. And did I feel a big shot! Especially if there was a pink card among catalogues and form letters reading "Call for package—too large for box. Postmaster." My ebullience usually flowered into skinning the cat at Bell's hitching rack on the way home.

There's relaxation, too, looking for comic touches in the subdued pageantry of cultivated classes flowing through such avenues as Park and Madison. This afternoon one of the levities was a puckish gentleman who stepped out of the Waldorf. He hailed a taxi and with infinite and somewhat teetering pains placed his cane inside. "I just want to stow this stick," he explained to the driver. "I can get along without it." And he zigzagged up the street.

Nearly every writer has his special brand of mnemonics to stimulate memory during those aridities when ideas come to a full stop. Michael Arlen told me there was a stretch of Birdcage Walk in London that spurred him on. While walking there one day he felt more acutely than ever before his poverty and inability to write. After success when he felt frustrate he would go back.

It's proverbial Eugene O'Neill writes trilogies on the sea coast. Dreiser has done best work in neighborhood of Washington Square and David Graham Phillips could only harness his thoughts standing at a bookkeeper's desk. When the late Dr. George Dorsey found himself mentally sterile there was an old boarding house district in Chicago whither he fled and soon found himself whirling with literary promises. Peter B. Kyne can write about stories anywhere. But California alone gives zest for full length novels.

Going to Tappan's near Coney for a shore dinner is a seasonal rite among New Yorkers of another generation. It stands—a pleasant rambling shingled house in the yard overlooking Sheepshead Bay—as it did 60 years ago. The same dinner is served as when opened. The waiters are colored and a negro quartette harmonize in Southern airs wandering from table to table. It's always crowded.

A return voyager at Pier 16 today crimsoned because custom inspection revealed false faces from Augria for his children. He should have piped the day some ladies, also docking, were telling they always read my stuff. Suddenly an inspector stuck out his arm with: "Is this your'n?" He held the lower section of my zebra striped flannels. "Certainly not!" I exclaimed with a the-very-idea sniff. To this day we use the left-over undershirt that matched, to polish the brass door-knobs.

Listen, World!

Your Defence Mechanism

EVERY NOW and then the scientists invent a term that says a fistful. For example, that phrase "DEFENCE MECHANISM."

That phrase, IF YOU HAVE THE COURAGE TO FOLLOW IT THROUGH, will tell you more about yourself and your fellow man than a dozen heavy volumes on psychology.

What does it mean? Just what it says. Defence mechanism is a mechanism for defence.

Elsie Robinson

What kind of defence?

DEFENCE AGAINST LIFE.

But why should we want a defence against life?

Because life is increasingly complicated and dangerous and uncomfortable.

And we humans are still weak and timid, lazy and fuzzy minded.

So then, what?

So then, unless we're unusually wise and brave, we look around for something that will protect our wobbly spines and yet, at the same time, save our faces.

But where will we find it?

Obviously, there's no such contraption in the stores. We're forced to make it for ourselves, in the secret places of our minds and hearts. And each man makes his own Defence Mechanism according to his own need and nature.

There's Mrs. Brown. What's her great fear; her most urgent need? Her great fear is that she'll lose her indifferent husband. Her urgent need is for something that will keep that husband by her side.

Other wives have this same fear and need, and meet it quite differently. They hustle about and pamper such alluring homes and delightful companionship that the most reluctant male "stays put" voluntarily. Or if they happen to be of such spunky nature that they don't want reluctant males at any price, they check them off the list and get going on their own.

Mrs. Brown is too lazy and too timid to adopt either of these expedients. But she contrives something actually effective—

SICK HEADACHES.

Now there are sick headaches AND sick headaches. Some are actual illnesses needing medical treatment. But a great percentage of them are WISH FULFILLMENTS—and highly practical ones.

For, as a Defence Mechanism against the restlessness of philandering papas and rebellious sons and daughters, Sick Headaches can't be beat! Forthwith, the laziest and most cussed Mama becomes A Martyr—and what happens if you desert or neglect a Martyr? Try and do it!

But that's only one example of a Defence Mechanism. There are scores of others.

There's the man who can't meet the cruel competition of modern business and achieves rheumatism, or nervous indigestion, as a way out; or starts inventing something; or contrives to be always "picked on" and fired by brutal bosses.

And, in every family, there's at least one example of the Wonderful Young Genius who is so sensitive and talented that she, or he, can't possibly be expected to wash the dishes or clean out the garage.

For Defence Mechanisms are legion, and if you want one bad enough, almost anything comes in handy. Even those experiences which should most enrich the soul —GRIEF; ADVERSITY; REMORSE; RELIGION—even these can become rackets.

In simple slang, that's what a Defence Mechanism is—a racket. Just another way of putting your own selfish schemes across. And each one of us has at least one. Me? I have a dozen!

Just Folks

Loser and Victor

He was beaten from the start,
Beaten by his doubting heart,
And he had a ready ear
For the busy tongue of fear,
And he had a timid mind
Unto fretfulness inclined,
Filled with many reasons why
It was vain for him to try.

Given a task he'd shake his head,
"Can't do that!" he often said,
"Times are hard and none will stay,
Listening to the words I say.
It is futile now to try,
People simply will not buy!"
Both discouraged and afraid.
But another kind of man
Thought this way: "Perhaps I can!
If I will supply the pluck,
Fortune may provide the luck.
If I have the grit to try,
There are people who may buy;
Anyhow, I'll not submit
To defeat before I'm hit."

One was beaten from the start,
Beaten by his doubting heart,
Beaten when he gave his ear
To the busy tongue of fear.
But another with his chance,
Seized the moment to advance,
And came happy home at night
Just because he dared to fight.

Human Side of the News

Photographing the Eye for Crime Clues—a South Sea Island Paradise

—By Edwin C. Hill—

It's a curious fact of life that the most fantastic and incredible inventions of fiction have a way of turning up as sober fact, on Page 1 of our newspapers. Jules Verne wrote "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." Years passed, and the submarine outmarveled his marvellous fancy. Mister Kipling imagined the transatlantic flight of a dirigible in his "With the Night Mail." Thirty years later Dr. Hugo Eckener drove the Graf Zeppelin over the Atlantic almost precisely as Kipling foretold it would be done.

These startling coincidences of fancy and fact turn up, even in that mysterious borderline between life and death. A short time ago there was a murder in Columbus county, North Carolina. There was no clue, no trace of the murderer. But Sheriff Hargrove recalled a fiction story in which the photographed eyes of a dead man revealed, in images fixed upon the retina, a terrible secret.

The sheriff took a picture of the eyes of the murdered man. That photograph revealed to him, he positively asserts, the face of the murderer. He arrested the man and a confession followed. The fiction story which gave him the idea was Rudyard Kipling's "At the End of the Passage."

Four officials of the British Government in India, met, as customary, for a week-end in the bungalow of one of their number and played whist in a hundred-and-one degrees of heat. Exhausted and nerve-strained they played their cards and quarreled in uncontrollable irritation at mere existence.

Their host, Hummil, grew intolerably insulting. But the doctor Spurstow, with his eyes on Hummil's white, pinched face and his unnaturally large eyes, kicked the friends under the table. No man resented the savage personalities that dripped from the lips of the nerve-tortured host. And after two of the four had ridden away, Hummil confessed to the doctor that he couldn't sleep. A blind face that cried and could not wipe its eyes, lay in wait for him in the dark. He dared not give way to sleep, in the dreadful fear that the blind and faceless Thing would seize him. He made it a habit to rest on an elbow, with a spur in the bed under him to stimulate him if he fell back. Doctor Spurstow injected morphine and the next day departed for his own station.

A week later, when the three returned to Hummil's bungalow, they found their friend dead in bed, and in the staring eyes terror beyond the expression of any pen. They questioned Hummil's servant, who said to them:

"Heavenborn, in my poor opinion, this, that was my master, has descended into the Dark Places and there has been caught because he was not able to escape with sufficient speed." . . . And later, when those things were done that had to be done, Dr. Spurstow said, absently: "Tisn't in medical science". . . "What?" . . . Things in a dead man's eye". . . "For goodness sake, leave that horror alone," said Lowndes. "I've seen a native die of pure fright when a tiger chivvied him. I know what killed Hummil". . . "The deuce you do! I'm going to try to see."

And the doctor retreated into the bathroom with a Kodak camera. After a few minutes there was the sound of something being hammered to pieces, and he emerged, very white indeed . . . "Have you got a picture?" said Mottram. "What does the thing look like?" . . . "It was impossible of course. You needn't look, Mottram. I've torn up the film. There was nothing there. It was impossible". . . "That," said Lowndes, very distinctly, watching the shaking hand striving to relight the pipe, "is a damned lie!"

If you take the little steamer at Marseilles, it will cost about ten dollars of your money and 18 hours of your time to get to Majorca, largest of the Balearic Islands, and one of the few Paradises left on this earth. That was how I found it, but it seems, today, that too many Americans are settling in this Mediterranean fairyland where one can live like a king on a dollar a day.

The Police of Palma, a city of 80,000, arrested and fined a quarter of our citizens on the technical charge of not registering their passports. This is strange news, for the Majorcans are a happy, most obliging people. Apparently their dreamy existence was disturbed by too many restless Yankees, and one can scarcely blame them for declining to become a vanishing race, like the Indians, before a horde of advancing Americans.

Yet I would brave arrest to walk again through the flower scented groves and the fields of olive, where the whole gracious island lies under the southern sun like an imprisoned rainbow and glows like a moonstone under the lone thin stars.

And to sit at early morning coffee under the heavenly purple of the bougainvillea and gaze out over the blue sea at the dancing sails of the fisher-folk and be summoned back to earth and material needs by the soft and genial voice of plump Maria: "Buenos Dias, senor. Behold! The good God smiles with us this morning."

Once More, Mr. Hitler

This Idea May Not Work

Mr. Hitler, who believes in being a REAL dictator, tolerating no opposition, says, "If the older generation cannot get accustomed to us, we shall take their children away from them and rear them as needful for the Fatherland."

Many theorists and rulers have suggested taking children from their parents and bringing them up on some improved basis. But thus far it has never worked well.

If Hitler tries it he may learn that some things the Germans will not stand, even from Hitler.

Hitler says "Let it be written on our epitaphs 'we have been hard' we have been ruthless; but we have been good Germans.'"

Writing your own epitaph in advance is dangerous, for you are not there when it is really written. Mr. Hitler might be surprised to read his, as it will be engraved some day.

Valentine Sabaudon, who farms 500 acres with his wife, six children, a dozen laborers and their families, decided not to pay his "social insurance tax." When the government undertook to sell his property, thousands gathered, heads of farmers and gendarmes were broken. Sabaudon, a war hero, with a Legion of Honor decoration, nine citations for bravery and a war cross, insisted on auctioning off his war helmet first of all.

What interests history in this incident is the fact that Sabaudon, while fighting so desperately for France, was also fighting FOR HIS FIVE HUNDRED ACRES.

In comparison to population France has more owners of farms than any other country in the world.

That helps to explain the hard fighting at Verdun. And when Charles the Twelfth of Sweden took twelve thousand fighting men into Russia, he took 12,000 Swedish real estate owners, which helps to explain their ability to cut their way through the armies of Peter the Great.

If you want good citizens let them own part of their own country, then watch them fight for it.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose influence caused a camp to be established for unemployed women, was disappointed when she found only thirty women in the camp. You can't do much for several million women out of jobs by sending thirty to a camp, even though their principal meal include "roast lamb, beets, peas, potatoes, coffee, cake and strawberries, prepared by a camp dietitian."

Perhaps it was a mistake to say that no woman over fifty would be admitted to the camp, especially as women past fifty are most in need of help, and deserve it.
